Tinian mayor-elect Joey Patrick San Nicolas has asked the Superior Court to junk Tinian Mayor Ramon M. Dela Cruz's lawsuit that seeks to force a recount of the ballots for Tinian mayor.

In his response to Dela Cruz's lawsuit, San Nicolas, through counsel Matthew T. Gregory, also asked the court to uphold the election results that showed him winning over the incumbent by seven votes.

One of the most iconic sites on Saipan, Mt. Tapochau, is also one of the hardest to get to, with a rough road pockmarked with deep potholes and loose gravel that make for a treacherous approach when going up or down the moun-

BSI president, CEO says he can't wait to get started

By MARK RABAGO

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Best Sunshine International Ltd. president and CEO Mark Anthony Brown arrived on island last Tuesday and is eager to hit the ground running on the company's $7.1-billion integrated casino resort project.

However, he and BSI will just have to wait a little bit longer as the Commonwealth holds its runoff election for governor tomorrow and the release of the official results.

Not that BSI is betting on a particular candidate to win. Brown said they willing to work with either Gov. Eloy S. Inos or his challenger in the runoff, former speaker Heinz S. Hofschneider.

"I don't think it matters to us. The wait is frustrating and I want to get started. Our whole company does. ...There are so many things hinging on the election finally [being] over. So we can get answers from whoever that person is. So we can just move forward because everyone is so focused on that. We've been patiently waiting," he said during a meet-and-greet with media yesterday at Hyatt Regency Saipan.

The 53-year-old veteran casino executive said that Best Sunshine, a subsidiary of Hong Kong-based Pacific Imperial International Holdings Ltd., has already showed good faith by plunking down $41 million in investment in the CNMI even before a land lease has been executed. He said this also the primary reason he joined the company on Nov. 10.

"The reason I joined is the $41 million they put out so far and $10 million is not for anyone else but for the people who live here. That's really it. Here's $10 million I want to pay your utilities for the next three months. Why? Who else would do that? This company did that to show good faith and we still don't have an answer. We still don't know where the land is coming. The $31 million we had to but the $10 million we didn't have to."

At the moment, Brown will be commuting between Saipan and Hong Kong, but he promised to make Saipan his home once construction of the casino resort starts.

"I started Nov. 10 and my entire week was listening to pitches from at least two architects a day in Hong Kong. I can't even say where, what, and how big it is. They're showing us four different designs of 100 rooms and 2,000 rooms."

He said he has already made the rounds of the island, looking at what public and private lands are available.

"I like the Garapan area because this is where the people are and most hotels [are situated]. This area is very nice but you couldn't build a big property here."

Brown said land is the determining factor and, once the properties for BSI's development are identified, everything will fall into place.

On a more personal note, the former Venetian Macao and Sands Macao president said he immediately fell in love with Saipan and being personally here has only magnified his infatuation.

"It's just beautiful. I said it's God's country. Even before arriving and just seeing the pictures. It's more beautiful in person. Pictures usually give you an impression that 'this can't be real' and then you get here and it's actually more beautiful."

Brown said Saipan actually reminds him of his hometown because like Brigantine, New Jersey, which has Brigantine Avenue and Bayshore Avenue as its main thoroughfares, Saipan also has two main roads, Beach Road and Middle Road.

"It's an island I'm familiar with because I feel that I've been born and raised here...I feel like I'm 12 years old riding my bike down the street and I'm back home again. It feels very familiar to me."

CNMI closely monitoring surprise Japan recession

By MARK RABAGO
mark_rabago@saipantribune.com

The Inos administration is closely monitoring economic reports out of Japan, after this key tourism market announced Monday that it has slipped into recession.

Press secretary Angel Demapan said that, while the CNMI is concerned with the situation in Japan, it is confident that its diversified portfolio—that counts South Korea, China, and Russia as its other key tourism markets—will soften the blow of a decline in tourists from Japan, which is always inevitable if a source country is in recession.

“The recent development of Japan falling into recession is a cause for concern for many countries. After all, Japan does have the third largest economy in the world. The Inos administration is closely monitoring the situation in Japan and the anticipated impact it may have on our tourism industry. While events like these are far beyond our control, this is why it is also important to have a diversified tourism industry with multiple source markets throughout Asia. Nonetheless, it appears that the Japan government is already taking steps to remedy the situation so we are hopeful that things will turn around for the betterment of the country,” said Demapan in an email to Saipan Tribune.

The Marianas Visitors Authority assured its tourism partners and the Inos administration that tourists from Japan will remain steady, at least for the next three months.

“An analysis was made by our MVA Japan office and it was noted that indicators of a sudden decline in outbound travel from Japan are not there and that not much change is expected in the next three months,” said MVA managing director Perry Tenorio in an email to Saipan Tribune.

Quoting the report from MVA Japan, Tenorio said aside from a holding pattern on tourists going to the CNMI from October to December, the weak yen and fuel prices would have a negative impact on long-haul destinations.

The report also said some business types and companies are in better shape than others, but for the first time in several

Ann Margaret Ayuyu, 25, said it is kind of a big change for gas prices to be decreasing.

“I am still kind of skeptic about it; it might go up again. But it saves me a lot of gas [for now] and it is a big help for everyone,” Ayuyu said.

A national survey reported by the Associated Press early November stated that gas prices have gone down 13 cents. The current average as of yesterday for U.S gas prices on regular is $2.863 and $3.260 for premium.

There was no immediate report if gas prices on Tinian and Rota have also gone down. Gas prices on both islands are usually much higher compared to Saipan.

Airlines will operate two direct charter flights from Chubu Centrair International Airport on Dec. 27 and 30, respectively, to stimulate the yearend travel demands to the CNMI.

It said the aircraft will be a Boeing 737, which will increase the seat capacity to 288 seats.

In conclusion, MVA Japan said in the next months or October-December 2014, the overall outbound travel should remain unchanged, at -21. But it is expected to increase in Micronesia (+4), Oceania (+4), and South Korea (+3).

According to the Associated Press, Japan's economy unexpectedly slipped back into recession as housing and business investment dropped following a sales tax hike, hobbling its ability to help drive the global recovery.

The world's third-largest economy contracted at a 1.6 percent annual pace in the July-September quarter, the government said Monday, confounding expectations that it would rebound after a big drop the quarter before.

HEINZ IS A BITTER MAN: Read the FACTS.

Learn the TRUTH about Heinz and Ray

1. Heinz, with calculated no good motive, went against the late Governor Larry I. DeLeon Guerrero, his own daughter's grandpa, and attempted to have the governor impeached for replacing the dilapidated CUC power plants that ended years of rotating power outages in the 1980s and '90s in Saipan. Heinz' ploy to hurt Governor Guerrero failed.
2. Heinz and Ray Yumul sponsored a House Bill to remove the CNMI government-paid holidays. These two (2) characters wanted to take away our paid holidays and quality time with our families. Our take-home pay is small enough. Now, they want to rob us in plain view using their position and station in life.
3. Heinz devised a scheme, a tasteless plan, against now retired Northern Marianas College (NMC) President Agnes Manglona McPhetres and attempted but failed to remove the president from the college for vindictive and self-serving reasons. Agnes is the co-founder of NMC and provided over 20 years of excellent leadership that helped grow and develop the first and only post-secondary learning institution in the Northern Mariana Islands. Thank you Agnes! Thank you NMC!
4. The late CNMI Supreme Court Justice Ramon G. Villagomez, during his tenure as NMC Board of Regents Chairman, admonished Heinz for being disrespectful, arrogant, out of character and inconsiderate in the manner in which he used his legislative position to promote his personal vendetta and agenda at NMC.
5. Heinz conducted an Oversight Hearing on CUC because of personal grudges (ill feelings) against his own daughter's grandpa, the late Governor Larry I. DeLeon Guerrero. Strangely, Ramon Guerrero (Kumoi), Heinz' nemesis, now supporter, served as CUC executive director under Governor Larry DeLeon Guerrero. Heinz PLUS Kumoi, believe this, has the makings of strange bedfellows. These two still have battle scars from their last fight. Strange change?
6. Heinz is a DEAD-BEAT DAD for two daughters from two different women besides his wife. You can call that irresponsible. Hypocrisy for change?
7. Heinz walked out of his supporters after losing the 2009 General Election. We watched him leave! This guy is spineless-has zero sense of gratitude; deficient in human feelings. Heinz even refused to have his picture taken with his own daughter at his own daughter's wedding when asked by a family member. You call that insensitive. We call the SICKENING. Change? Shame on you, Heinz.
8. Former Governor Juan N. Babauta, after losing in the 2009 General Election, asked Heinz just before (prior to) the 2009 Runoff Election to meet, thank and rally his supporters, but Heinz said, "No, we don't need them." Governor Babauta left Heinz behind and took his supporters elsewhere. Yes, Heinz lost the election.
9. Last week, November 11, 2014, during Veterans Day ceremony, Heinz, inserted (invited) himself WITHOUT proper protocol or permission, obviously for self-serving political reasons, into the group of veterans during the wreath-laying memorial service, an honor given only to veterans and public officials to lay the wreath. Heinz disrespected us veterans. His motive was unscrupulous and his conduct was unacceptable. WE VETERANS DO NOT APPRECIATE WHAT HEINZ DID. WE GATHERED TO HONOR OUR FELLOW WARRIORS FOR COVERING OUR SIX AND BRINGING US HOME. Heinz is not a veteran and also not a public official.
10. Ray Yumul easily got duped by Heinz and by his own miscalculated ambition. YOU, Ray, should never listened to Heinz, AND most importantly, YOU, should not have listened to premature political advice. Ray's reason for running as Heinz' lieutenant governor is NOT WORTHY of mention. Take a look at Heinz' financial backer mastermind. He's still licking his wounds after 3 losses in 2001, 2005 and 2009, and BOTH, teacher and student, simply cannot learn the same lesson. Now, look at Ray's nonchalant attitude. The KID is a follower, not a leader. He is still choking on the silver spoon stuck in his mouth. LIP SERVICE IS CHEAP CHANGE. LET US CHOOSE PROVEN SOLUTION-DRIVEN LEADERSHIP OVER LIP SERVICE.

We intent to choose to be governed by Governor Eloy S. Inos, who demonstrates genuine care and fortitude, displays moral strength, values and principles, and exhibits excellent leadership qualities to guide us, feels our pain and suffering, finds solutions and strengthens our hope. This election is not about the rich getting richer. THIS ELECTION IS ABOUT ALL OF US AND THE FUTURE OF OUR CHILDREN AND COMMONWEALTH. PLEASE VOTE FOR SOLUTION-DRIVEN LEADERSHIP. We respectfully ask for your support.

Please VOTE for INOS-TORRES on November 21, Runoff Election. CHOOSE SOLUTION-DRIVEN LEADERSHIP. It is good for all of us.

WE RESPECTFULLY AND HUMBLY ASK FOR YOUR SUPPORT. PLEASE VOTE FOR INOS-TORRES, NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT.

Dr. Ramsey files another lawsuit vs CHCC

Dr. Gary Ramsey, a former medical staff at the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp., has filed another lawsuit against CHCC for allegedly refusing to pay him $14,055 in physician services.

Ramsey, through counsel Samuel Mok, is suing CHCC for breach of contract, unjust enrichment, and violation of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

Ramsey asked the Superior Court to hold CHCC liable to pay him $14,055 in damages, plus court costs, and attorney's fees.

Mok stated in the complaint that Ramsey worked for CHCC from 2010 to 2012, during which time he also delivered services at both the Tinian and Rota health centers on an emergency basis at their requests in order to fill-in for absent physicians and/or remedy a general physician shortage.

Mok said in addition, in March 2012 then-CHCC chief executive officer Juan N. Babauta asked Ramsey to devise a personnel policy for the hospital.

The lawyer said Ramsey spent 60 hours of his time completing the special project by drafting and delivering a new personnel policy to Babauta as requested.

However, Mok said, the doctor was never paid for his work despite the fact he only charged a modest $1,500 for his efforts.

To date, Mok said, the total amount owed Ramsey for all the work he performed for the CHCC, Tinian and Rota health centers, including the unreimbursed travel expenses he personally incurred for travel to Tinian, is $14,055.

"To date, CHCC has refused to adjust any of the amounts due and owing to plaintiff Dr. Ramsey despite due demand," the lawyer said.

Last September, Ramsey also filed a lawsuit in federal court over alleged wrongful termination of his medical privilege at CHCC.

In that case, Ramsey is suing CHCC chief executive officer Esther Muna, CHCC OB/Gynecology department chair Dr. Jeanolivia Grant, CHCC Medical Affairs director Dr. Sherleen Osman, former Department of Public Health Secretary Joseph Kevin Villagomez, CHCC, the CNMI government, and 10 unnamed individuals.

Ramsey asked the U.S. District Court for the NMI to find the defendants liable to pay him damages, attorney's fees, and court costs.

Ramsey is a physician and surgeon specializing in obstetrics, gynecology, and women's health. He was first licensed by the Medical Board of California in 1991.

Ramsey first came to work on Saipan in April of 1999. He was first licensed by the CNMI Healthcare Professions Licensing Board in 1999.

He worked at the Commonwealth Health Center for eight years, from 1999 to July of 2007. (Ferdie de la Torre)

DPW secretary wants rebar of political signs also removed

Department of Public Works Secretary Martin Sablan is reminding all political parties and candidates of the Nov. 4 elections not to forget to also remove the rebars when they take out their political signs along the roads.

"There already is an announcement that gave them so many days to remove the signs but I think it's important that the political parties also to please remove the rebar that are used to secure the signs because when we mow the lawn it damages our equipment," Sablan said.

He said it's just a friendly reminder for candidates of the last general election. "I know they'll do it. We just need to remind them."

Earlier, the Saipan Zoning Office asked candidates to start taking down their political signs.

Zoning said all candidates should take down their signs, except for the candidates for the gubernatorial runoff election—NMI Republican Party's Gov. Eloy S. Inos and his running mate, Senate President Ralph DLG. Torres and independents, former speaker Heinz S. Hofschneider and former Senate floor leader Ray N. Yumul.

Any candidate who fails to comply will be charged $150 each day that the sign is still up, according to Zoning. (Mark Rabago) constituents. I will listen to your problems and as your voice in the Senate, help you find the solutions for the problems afflicting you today and to lay the foundation so that all our future generation will not suffer the same plight," he read from prepared speech after he took his oath.

Igisomar, who won in the special elections for senator to continue the unfinished term of former Senate floor leader Ray Yumul, said the fact that he only has a little over half of the usual term for senator gives him additional motivation.

"I am not a stranger to hard work and because I only have two years, I am motivated to invite key stakeholders from the government and the private sector in order to identify problematic areas and remove any hindrance so that we can help our private sector flourish, which will translate to revenue generation for our government. This will require hard work, dedication, and perseverance and I am confident that if we establish a sound working relationship based on trust, mutual respect, and selflessness, we can accomplish great things," said the former Commerce secretary.

Senate members took turns welcoming Igisomar to the upper chamber, with Senate floor leader Pete Reyes (Ind-Saipan) saying Igisomar can always ring him up for advice. Reyes is retiring soon.

Sen. Victor Hocog (R-Rota) said he welcomes Igisomar not only to the 18th Senate but the incoming 19th Senate as well.

Sens. Jovita Taimanao (R-Saipan) and Joaquin Borja (Ind-Tinian) both lamented that they will only have a short time to work with Igisomar in the 18th Senate. Both Taimanao and Borja lost their elections bids.

Sen. Francisco Q. Cruz (R-Tinian) gave a comedic twist to the proceedings when he expressed hope that Igisomar sticks around as his seatmate because the past two—Yumul and Torres—resigned and ascended to the Senate presidency, respectively. This elicited laughter from the audience.

Sen. Francisco Borja (Ind-Tinian) said he is happy that Saipan is finally well represented in the Senate with Igisomar's swearing in yesterday.

Torres, meanwhile, congratulated Igisomar, his wife, and his entire family for winning the special elections for senator last Nov. 4. He said although he is a senator from Saipan, he also represents the entire CNMI.

Sen. Paul Manglona (Ind-Rota) was absent.

Igisomar was appreciative of the kind words from his colleagues.

"I thank my colleagues for welcoming me with open arms and as the freshman senator from Saipan, I look forward to learning from each of them and collaborating with them to make the rest of the 18th and the 19th Senate an active and productive body."

Igisomar won via landslide in a three-man race in the special elections for senator after garnering 5,903 votes.

Yumul resigned after opting to run as independent gubernatorial bet Heinz Hofshneider's lieutenant governor in the Nov. 4 elections.

Hofshneider and Yumul finished second and will figure in a runoff between Gov. Eloy S. Inos and Torres tomorrow, Nov. 21.

court to direct the Commonwealth Election Commission to issue him a certificate of election as the new mayor of Tinian.

The mayor-elect demanded an award of court costs, expenses, fees, and attorney's fees.

The election commission has already officially declared San Nicolas (GOP) as the winner of the Nov. 4 mayoral election by seven votes over Dela Cruz (Independent), 703 to 696 votes.

In his lawsuit, Dela Cruz, through counsel Mark B. Hanson, alleged several irregularities during the election, including a discrepancy between the votes cast for Tinian mayor tabulated on Tinian and the tabulation on Saipan of the votes physically cast on Tinian for Tinian mayor.

Hanson said there were possibly 10 votes for the Tinian mayor race that were not counted by CEC from the ballots physically cast on Tinian.

Hanson also claimed that CEC allowed seven Republican Party supporters to cast votes in the Tinian election despite the fact that those seven were "serving a sentence for a felony."

In San Nicolas' answer, Gregory denied any irregularities.

On the felon voters issue, Gregory said Dela Cruz was aware before the election of the identity of any alleged felon voters for Tinian through the roster of eligible voters, yet he failed to contest the eligibility of these voters.

Santos is suing Aldan and the Commonwealth Election Commission in Superior Court.

Santos, through counsel Janet H. King, asked the court to declare Aldan not a resident or domiciliary of the Northern Islands and not eligible to be a candidate in the Nov. 4 election for the Northern Islands mayor.

Santos requested the court to declare him the elected Northern Islands mayor for garnering the largest number of legal votes.

Alternatively, Santos wants the court to issue an order setting aside the election results and ordering the election commission to hold a new mayoral election for the Northern Islands.

Santos also demanded a court judgment holding Aldan and CEC jointly liable to pay him for his fees, costs, and expenses in his election contest.

Aldan, of the NMI Republican Party, won over independent candidate Santos with a margin of 33 votes, 94-61, according to CEC's official election results.

King stated in the complaint that CEC allowed Aldan to run as a candidate for Northern Islands mayor in the Nov. 4 election despite his being not a resident or domiciliary of the Northern Islands.

King said that only individuals registered to vote in Precinct 4D (Northern Islands) for the Nov. 4 election could vote for the Northern Islands mayor.

The lawyer also alleged that on Nov. 4, CEC allowed 40 individuals to vote who were not eligible to vote for Northern Islands mayor.

King said these individuals were not residents of the Northern Islands on Nov. 4 or ever, yet they voted for Aldan. King said without these illegal votes, Santos would have prevailed over Aldan.

Aldan is program manager for the Northern Islands Mayor's Office. He has been serving as acting mayor because of the current mayor's health condition.

ROAD

P. Sablan (Ind-Saipan) met last Thursday to discuss providing some relief to critical areas of Mt. Tapochau.

Sablan told Saipan Tribune yesterday that he met with the Marianas Visitors Authority, Department of Public Works, and the Saipan Mayor's Office to explore a small coordinated effort to resolve this problem.

"A couple of weeks ago I went to Mt. Tapochau and tried to go up and saw how bad the roads were, so I took the initiative to call up DPW, MVA, and the Mayor's Office to try to get a coordinated effort on what to do with the problem of the road on Mt. Tapochau," Sablan said.

Those at the meeting were Saipan Mayor Marian Tudela and Mayor's Office field operations director Joann Aquino, MVA managing director Perry Tenorio, MVA community projects manager Martin Duenas, and DPW Secretary Martin Sablan.

Sablan said the following day—Friday—he joined Tenorio, Martin Sablan, Tudela, Aquino, and DPW engineers to look at the roads on Mt. Tapochau.

Tony Sablan said there are some right of way land issues that need to be resolved and he would try to speak with legislators to come up and appropriate funds.

The last time the road was fixed was back on April before the annual Catholic tradition of Good Friday, when devotees walks to the top of the mountain. At the time, the potholes were covered with asphalt by the Saipan Mayor's Office.

MVA funding

In a separate interview yesterday, Tenorio said he will talk with the MVA board and seek to use a portion of the destination enhancement funds for the most critical and problematic area of the road.

Tenorio said there is one major problematic area that residents pointed out when their group visited Mt. Tapochau last Friday. The area is near the housing area in Mt. Tapochau that is close to a steep incline heading to the top of the mountain.

"We received DPW's proposed cost to the one area in Mt. Tapochau and we will discuss this with the board," Tenorio said.

Mayor's support

Tudela said the last time the Saipan Mayor's Office did any work on the road going up Mt. Tapochau was during Good Friday.

Aquino said they don't want to fix some areas of the road with asphalt this time because it is just a temporary or band-aid fix.

"Usually the asphalt is washed away during the rain so we asked for a different solution. DPW then pointed out a flowable fill," Aquino said.

Flowable fill is a self-compacting low strength material with a flowable consistency that is used as a backfill material. It is not concrete nor is used to replace concrete. It also won't require any excavation.

Tudela said they will provide manpower if needed.

"We can't provide equipment because we won't have any until late December or mid-January, so we will try and provide the manpower for this project if it is funded for," she said.

DPW estimate

In a separate interview with Martin Sablan, he said it would cost less than $100,000 to fix the more problematic areas of the road.

He said they will use the flowable fill or concrete-treated base course for the potholes.

"MVA is willing to do a co-share and our engineers came up with two cost estimates," Martin Sablan said.

MVA has proposed to provide between $30,000 to $40,000 for the area near the housing.

Martin Sablan said that DPW cannot do the work itself so they will look at other contractors to actually do it and see what to do to cut the cost for the project.

NMC looks to 'Guam model' to finance facility upgrades

By DENNIS B. CHAN
dennis_chan@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Northern Marianas College hopes to have a "campus renaissance" soon, with a plan to initiate by the end of the next calendar year a facility financing scheme based on the "Guam model."

Regent William Torres, who chairs the fiscal committee on facilities, said that U.S. Department of Agriculture area director Joseph Diego assured him in a meeting last week that NMC would receive "due priority and commitment" for facility financing from USDA.

Torres said he also met with the University of Guam Board of Regents and the planning and facility manager of the Guam Community College.

Both the UOG and GCC have availed of the Community Facilities Direct and Guaranteed Loan program under the USDA's Rural Development program. UOG has borrowed $13.5 million over 40 years at 4.5 percent interest, and GCC has borrowed $3.5 million.

UOG services this debt through a combination of commitment from the Guam Legislature for an annual appropriation of $500,000 per year for the life of the loan, $200,000 from the UOG Endowment Foundation, and $50,000 from internal revenue sources.

GCC services its loan through revenues from tuition and fees.

With this in mind, Torres said he has met with Vicki Villagomez from the CNMI Capital Improvement Projects office, and expressed the need for executive commitment in the form of $1 million to $2 million in CIP money to the college for the next 10 or 15 years.

This, Torres said, will give the college greater leverage when it comes to debt service with USDA as it has a guarantee from the CNMI government in place.

The college has not undergone major reconstruction since it was built on or about 1955 as a single storey, semi-concrete hospital.

Under the leadership of his committee, Torres hopes to "learn from failures" in the past and provide the guidance necessary in providing students with the facilities they deserve.

Torres hopes that 80 percent of the CNMI's high school graduates will choose to "complete two-year degree at home" because there will be facilities and programs in place to make it a more viable and cheaper option.

"We owe it to our students to modernize the campus," he said.

He added that the college's accrediting commission also expects them to pursue upgrades in facilities.

"The assumption that the Medical Referral Services needs to be depoliticized is not true. To me, that is stating something that is totally opposite of the way it is," Sablan said.

He was referring to an ad placed by the Hofschneider-Yumul campaign in both newspapers last Friday, titled "Your Health Matters." In one of its statements, the HY campaign promised to "depoliticize Medical Referral."

Sablan said he does not want to be dragged into the politics of this Friday's gubernatorial runoff election but since the political ad brought up the issue, he wants to clarify why MRS is under the Governor's Office.

"Medical Referral patients are unforeseen and you cannot estimate and you cannot project [how many patients you're going to have in a year], so the only way for the government to really be able to accommodate this is that the governor has the expenditure authority to reprogram funds to be able to fund the requirements of this office," he said.

Sablan pointed out that decisions made by MRS are not made by the governor or anyone in the Legislature. MRS has its own medical referral committee composed of a team of six doctors and Sablan himself making the decisions whether patients are eligible or not for medical referral.

"Our rules and regulations state that if we ran out of appropriated funds, then MRS operation should shut down. Based on our budget that gets appropriated for MRS in the last five years, it is actually less than 30 percent of what our expenditures really are," he said.

How then does MRS get additional funding if its expenditures surpass the budget allocated for it?

"This is the reason why it was transferred to the Governor's Office because the governor has that expenditure authority to take surplus funds from other departments to be able to pay for this. Otherwise, patients here would be denied at other hospitals off-island," Sablan said.

He pointed out that MRS has rebuilt its credibility in the last few years among off-island hospitals. Without that credibility, patients wouldn't be accepted during off-island referrals, he said.

Sablan also noted that MRS has decreased its expenditures since he took over as its head.

Before he came into office, MRS' expenditure was over $11 million a year. In comparison, expenditures in the past three fiscal years have ranged between $5 million to $6 million.

"When they say that MRS needs to be depoliticized, I don't understand why? If anybody knows how we operate, nobody will need to say that. We transferred because the governor felt that he can reprogram funds—actual expenditure funds—to pay for this program," Sablan said.

UNDER MVA'S CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

TDI stresses equal opportunities for small tour operators

By DENNIS B. CHAN
REPORTER

Top Development Inc. welcomes the new tour guide/operator certification program that's now in the works by the Marianas Visitors Authority but would like policies and regulations that are fair to everyone, whether operators are "big or small," said executive vice president and chief operating officer Alfred Ho yesterday.

Ho agrees with the need for regulations but stressed that they should not favor bigger companies who may "monopolize" the industry. He said even smaller companies help the economy and don't take away from it as long as they are following the law and pay taxes.

"Just because you have a lot of money and monopolize the business does not mean you should have first priority," he added.

In a meeting last month, MVA board members cited how smaller "mom-and-pop" tour operators were popping up all over the islands. Stressing "quality over quantity," board member Jerry Tan said 10 companies with capital, insurance, and good hiring practices would be better than 50 "mom-and-pop" companies where 10 are good and 40 are bad.

"We should put a lot of teeth [in the regulations]," Tan suggested then. "It may sound kind of tough but keep in mind we want quality people behind this industry."

Ho, for his part, believes that the nature of supply and demand is "tricky." The islands should not limit the number of tour operators, guides, or agents, he said.

For example, so far the island has 10 charter flights from China—four from Shanghai, four from Beijing, and two from Guangzhou, he said. With hotels and a casino in development this number may have to change.

"We're talking about multi-billion of dollars...Later on there may be 20, 30, or 40 [companies]," he said. "When the market is open is not the time to invite somebody to do business. It would be too late," he said.

Ho hopes that regulations would not limit operators based on their draw of tourists. He said tour-ists chartered to Saipan by bigger companies reserve the right to seek these "mom-and-pop" companies if they so choose, even if another more established company is promoted beforehand.

"When a customer comes to Saipan, they have the right not to choose the service offered by the travel agent," he said. He believes smaller tour operators would keep prices fair.

"When we're doing business, we involve a lot of overhead, but smaller business don't Mom-and-pop stores save a lot of money. This causes prices to drop," he said.

Ho said MVA has yet to reach out to TDI to discuss these policies.

Clarity

Masaru Sunaga, Pacific Micronesia Tours assistant general manager, pointed out that the new tour operator/guide program is now law and it "has to be done" to improve the industry.

"We must do this to ensure higher-quality service for our islands tourists," he said.

He confirmed that as president of the Japan Saipan Travel Association, he has met with MVA to discuss the tour guide manual that's now in the works.

He said one problem for tour guides is that there is "no official information" on, say, the height of Mt. Tapochao. Some tour guides have been providing varying heights to tourists, he said.

"Every guide must guide with the same information," he said.

On TDI's part, Ho would like to know more about the certificate program's language requirements. Public Law 18-58 would ensure minimum proficiency in the English language and successful training on the CNMI's history, culture, and scenic attractions under the certificate program.

Ho is concerned with how operators would be educated. For example, whether they would be educated in their "hometown Chinese" or in English.

He believes it would be "very difficult to have Chinese tour guides" become fluent in English. He suggests that tour guides be educated in Chinese, mainly because "no matter how good his English is," he said, a tour guide for Chinese tourists would speak to these tourists in Chinese.

BECQ plans govt recycling program

The Bureau of Environmental and Coastal Quality has set its eyes on early next year to begin its first-ever CNMI government recycling program, according to BECQ special assistant Jenny Salas.

She said government offices would be asked to recycle their waste and trash. This, she said, would have the CNMI government "leading by example" and promoting recycling in the community.

Salas will be spearheading the program and is in charge of its promotional activities.

Originally planned for this November, the bureau saw it best to move it to next year, as the election season has been ongoing, she said.

Right now, they are working on finding recycling bins to supply each and every government office, according Salas.

BECQ has been instrumental with the environmental educational and outreach on island. The recycling program will be on top of their Coral Reef Initiative, community events like First Friday Films, and the various beach cleanups they organize throughout the year. (Dennis B. Chan)

BOE chair concerned with shift in Congress

By DENNIS B. CHAN
dennis_chan@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

CNMI State of Education chair Herman Guerrero is a mite concerned over the shift in the U.S. Congress into the hands of Republicans, specifically in regards to the reauthorization of programs and grants under the Elementary Secondary Education Act, which funds many essential programs in the Public School System.

The CNMI will get over $30 million in federal educational funds this fiscal year. A large portion of this, according to Guerrero, is made up of consolidated grants under ESEA.

"We certainly would like to see the reauthorization [of ESEA] entertained by Congress," he said.

He hopes Congress will also include the CNMI in the Race To the Top program, which he said they have been excluded from in the past.

ESEA was renamed the No Child Left Behind Act in its reauthorization in 2001. It has been reauthorized every five years since it was signed into law in 1965.

"NCLB is six years overdue for an update," said U.S. Education Secretary Arne Duncan in a statement in August. He said that "some in Congress...would lock in major cuts to education funding" at a time when investment in education is "the only way" to remain globally competitive.

He supported a Democrat version of the bill passed in committee last June.

Guerrero would like to talk to U.S. Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan on the matter. He said he would like to know "what to expect" from this new Congress and from the delegate himself.

Sablan, a Democrat-caucusing independent, earlier said he is "not troubled by the change in party leadership [in Congress]."

"With the Republicans in complete control of Congress, the opportunities to advance any of my agenda items will shift. But I have built up a pretty good set of relationships with Republicans over the last six years. I wouldn't have been able to get seven Republican chairmen to visit our islands this August if I didn't have some friends on that side of the aisle," he had said.

HR says CUC voucher not a 'bribe'

POLITICAL QUIZ

We thank Herman R. Guerrero, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, who brought up the question of whether Best Sunshine's utility vouchers were "bribes to voters".

We think that is an excellent question for all of us to think about.

Certainly, the timing a day before election is questionable, And Governor Inos does control CUC through his Emergency Declaration.

Did IT compromise our government and our election by directing the CUC to pay-out B.S. 'vouchers' one day before our election?

Are the CUC-BS 'vouchers', 'scrips', a gift, a thing of value, consideration, or an incentive to vote?

TITLE 1: GOVERNMENT DIVISION 8: PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT

It shall be presumed that a nonmonetary gift having a value of less than $50 does not involve such an understanding.

(c) No person who has an economic interest in a specific Commonwealth business service or regulatory transaction shall give, directly or indirectly, to any Commonwealth judicial officer or public employee whose decision or action may substantially affect such transaction, or to the spouse or minor child of such official or employee, and none of them shall accept, any gift of:

Interpretation:

In our CNMI Elections, it is against Commonwealth law, it is illegal, for a person to lend you money or give you money or anything of value including a job for you or your family or personal assistance in order to convince you or make you vote for someone in an election.

A voter may not be scared or threatened or caused to vote or not to vote for any person or for any issue. This is against the law.

Is this influence buying? You think about it and decide.

USP4GG Marianas chapter donates to Haiyan victim

In commemoration of the first anniversary of Typhoon Haiyan/Yolanda, Dr. Celia B. Lamkin, chairperson of US Pinoys for Good Governance Marianas chapter, turned over a check donation of $300 to Rev. Father Rey Rosal, whose family members are victims of the killer typhoon. The donation was made last Saturday at the San Jose Church on Saipan.

"On behalf of the US Pinoys for Good Governance Marianas chapter members, volunteers and supporters, I am honored to present our humble donation to your family members who were affected by the Typhoon Yolanda last year and who are still recovering from this killer typhoon," Lamkin told Rosal.

In his response, Rosal, the parish priest of San Jose Church, said: "On behalf of my family, I would like to thank the US Pinoys for Good Governance Marianas chapter and all who in one way or another have helped the victims and survivors of Typhoon Yolanda through their monetary and in kind donations. As the Gospel tells us, 'Whatever you do to the least of my brothers, you do it unto me, says the Lord Jesus. Continue to share, that others may live.' God bless you all."

Lamkin said that their organization has identified "some more kababayans [compatriots] on Saipan who were devastated by Typhoon Yolanda who are still in need of help during this period of recovery. And we will have future projects to be able to assist them in our own little ways. I would like to thank all the USP4GG Marianas chapter members, volunteers and supporters who made this noble act possible."

US Pinoys for Good Governance has a mission to provide better lives for Filipinos everywhere and a better Philippines. It is led by its national chairperson, Loida Nicolas Lewis, president Rodel Rodis, and spokesman Ted Laguatan. Its headquarters is based in New York City. (PR)

A job for Congress

Even with 3 percent growth last quarter and unemployment at 5.8 percent, the lowest rate since the summer of 2008, Americans still worry about the economy, and with good reason.

While available jobs have increased at the top and the bottom of the pay scale, not much is happening in between. The country's vast middle class is also treading stagnant water when it comes to wages, which grew an average of 2 percent over the last year, barely outpacing the 1.7 percent inflation rate. Exit polls during the recent midterm elections showed that 78 percent of voters were troubled by the economy's direction, with two-thirds saying it's getting worse.

Millennials are still experiencing a slow launch. Weighed down by high college debt and low-paying jobs, too many are unable to fully participate in the economy, buy homes and start families. Older adults, meanwhile, are reluctant to retire because of inadequate pensions or savings. That means more of them are blocking others who are trying to climb the employment ladder.

Despite employment increases, the underemployment rate, which includes discouraged job seekers who aren't looking for work and part-timers who want full-time positions, is 11.5 percent. Although that's a significant improvement over the 13.7 percent rate a year ago, economists warn that it's still too high. Too many Americans are desperate for work, which keeps the pressure on wages low.

Some economists are optimistic that higher wages are on the horizon if growth continues. But the election suggested that Americans won't believe it until they see it. Even though they voted resoundingly against Democrats, the red states of Alaska, Arkansas, Nebraska, and South Dakota voted for minimum-wage hikes, sending a clear message of concern about the economy.

Now in charge of both houses of Congress, Republicans should heed that message and look for ways to make progress on economic issues. They should be able to agree to a higher federal minimum wage than the current $7.25 an hour, even if it's less than the $10.10 an hour President Obama has called for. At the same time, they could tie future increases to an economic indicator such as the Consumer Price Index, as New Jersey and other states have. As the Washington Post's Charles Lane has noted, that would give Democrats the higher wage they want while depriving them of a winning issue to use against Republicans in the future.

Most importantly, a higher minimum wage would give many Americans an immediate raise while increasing the upward pressure on wages in general. Stagnant pay, unwieldy personal debt, and poor retirement outlooks did not go away after the midterms. And until Washington starts solving these problems, voter anger won't go away either.

Learning to be less arrogant toward a changing China

By HAROLD JACKSON
THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

SHANGHAI, China—Once known as the Paris of the East, Shanghai has long been a setting where European style comfortably cohabited with Asian sensibilities. But in this new China, where capitalistic fervor is barely contained by a communist regime whose velvet glove still knows how to strike harshly, this city's resemblance to a Western metropolis seems even more pronounced.

But it's not just the Vera Wang boutique we passed by on the way to my hotel that makes me think this way. It is the confident stride of Chinese shoppers and workers on the street, it is the tone of their voice as they relate with pride what they have built and are building, it is the confidence in which they talk about their country's future.

I'm in China to learn how to be less arrogant. No, really. A People's Daily editor among a group of Chinese journalists who visited Philadelphia in September said arrogance was the reason Americans know so little about China. So, I'm here to learn.

Actually, making this trip as one of several American journalists participating in a program sponsored by the China United States Exchange Foundation was planned months before I knew how arrogant I was. But the timing couldn't be better.

You see, I don't totally disagree with the newspaper editor from Beijing. Americans should know more about China. We don't because we didn't believe we needed to be concerned about a lesser power. But with China now seemingly poised to challenge America's world economic dominance, it's time we paid closer attention.

Most Americans, I think, realize that today's China isn't the uniformly dressed collective of worker bees that Mao Tse-tung presided over more than a generation ago. But, how China has been able to embrace the same market economic principles that propel capitalism, while retaining a rigidly communist grip on all other aspects of Chinese society, is a mystery to us.

Chairman Mao wasn't around to see the transformation. He died in 1976. Three years later, Deng Xiaoping began engineering the change. But as pointed out by New Yorker reporter Evan Osnos, author of Age of Ambition: Chasing Fortune, Truth, and Faith in the New China, the movement began at the grass roots.

The collective approach to farming ordered by Mao had led to famine throughout China, including the village of Xiaogang, where 18 farmers decided to ignore government edicts and try something different. They divided the land, followed their own planting and harvesting schedules, and produced enough crops to sell the excess for profit.

Rather than crack down on the farmers, communist officials not only let them continue, with Deng's assent, they also let the idea spread, creating a "birdcage economy" in which the market was given only enough air to thrive without encouraging further independence. But the entrepreneurship genie was out of the bottle. Finally, in 1979, Deng declared, "Let some people get rich first, and gradually all the people will get rich together."

The next year was pivotal, Osnos said, with China creating special economic zones that offered tax breaks to attract foreign investment. In 1985, the government lifted restrictions on where people could live and rural residents began leaving the farms for jobs in the cities. An accompanying shutdown of state industries pushed more workers into the private sector.

Such rapid changes propelled a movement for independence beyond work, culminating in the 1989 mass protests in Beijing at Tiananmen Square, which began after the death of dissident leader Hu Yaobang. The government sent in troops. Protesters were killed. An iconic photo of a lone demonstrator confronting a tank has since served as an enduring symbol of the Chinese quest for more freedom.

That quest, despite efforts to suppress its presence, hovered like a rain cloud over the 2008 Olympics. The world paid attention as dissidents were rounded up before the Beijing Games. Journalists covering the Olympics had to overcome restrictions on Internet access enforced to keep the Chinese public from learning too much too fast.

Six years later, I'm in China to learn how much has changed and how much is yet to occur.

Every nation is a contradiction. America, the land of the free, leads the world in the number of people in prisons and jails, 2.2 million when last counted; too many of them African Americans like me. China's contradictions, though, may be even more untenable.

The people in America's prisons know they are not free. There is no pretense. In China, pretense seems crucial to individual success. But I don't know that for a fact. It's what I want to find out.

I want to know whether the Chinese believe being free to make a profit off of your labor is fair compensation for not having full access to the Internet, or not being free to speak your mind about your government. I'll try not to let my arrogance get in the way of what I want to learn.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Henry's letter

I couldn't believe my eyes when I read Henry U. Hofschneider's letter to the editor in yesterday's edition! He hit the nail right on the head! Best Sunshine's $10 million contribution to CUC benefits all, not some, as Heinz and Ray are claiming. And the best part of this letter is that he's endorsing IT, not his relative, Heinz. Why is that, I wonder?

Was this a political ploy for the GOP to get more votes? No it wasn't, because everybody wins! This wasn't just for the voting public but for everybody—American, Japanese, Chinese, Filipinos, etc. We all got a piece of this so thank you, Best Sunshine!

Another thing that caught my attention was an article in last week's paper regarding claims by HY group that they won't resort to mudslinging and dirty politics. Just that statement alone contradicts itself because now, it's mudslinging in the form of an accusation from HY to IT.

I especially loved the part where HY claims to be running a "grass-roots campaign with a shoestring budget." Come on, man. Without naming names, we all know who's financing their campaign.

I have to respect Juan Babauta's call for all his supporters to now endorse IT. I have never been a big fan of Babauta because time after time, he has shown his true colors of "looking out for No. 1." But the one thing he hasn't done was change his party affiliation. I think that's admirable because he even requested a primary to be held.

I, too, think there should've been a primary because the way I see it, Eloy, Juan, and Heinz are all Republicans in their hearts. Running as an "Independent" is taking the easy way out. Heinz and Ray are Republicans and should be true to themselves and their supporters but instead, they chose the easy way out because they know they would lose if a primary election was held. At least Babauta asked for a primary but for reasons unknown to me, the party decided against it. If HY would've run as the Republicans they are, I'm pretty sure the party would've had no choice but to hold a primary and, judging from the outcome of the votes, they would've definitely lost. Hell, they would've been spanked.

Another thing that irks me are the accusations that Eloy could've and should've done something to stop Ben's "mid-life crisis." Who's he gonna complain to? Anybody with any authority to stop Ben, like maybe the AG, are all Fitial appointees! The truth is that all the rallies held to get Ben out of office were attended by Eloy. Eloy spoke to the public at all of these functions regarding all of Fitial's wrongdoings. And the public responded to Eloy's call to support with the ousting of Fitial from office.

No mudslinging and dirty politics? You also harp on Eloy's illness. That, my friends, is what's known as a "low blow." Wondering why Eloy is not seen at GOP functions? Yeah, it's an election year but that doesn't stop the governor from doing his job. He is always well-represented at these functions but he's got a job to do and, in my opinion, he's doing it to the best he can considering everything that's going on—like trying to clean up the crap that he inherited from Ben.

Eloy doesn't have the luxury of going to all the events and pocket meetings or going door-to-door like Heinz and Ray, shaking hands and kissing babies, and the biggest weapon in any candidate arsenal—the ever-popular "wave! Heinz and Ray don't have jobs right now so they can go and do all that's expected of a candidate running for public office.

Get your facts straight guys and stop the last-minute low blows. That is definitely not one looks for in a "clean election" "IT" is absolutely "WORTED IT"!

Change starts with you!

For a few years, I've lived away from home. I've kept my voting status and have been quiet all these years.

Today, I ask you to think about the past few years. Think about education, healthcare, your lifestyle, and ask yourself one question, were you content and satisfied? I can honestly say that I wasn't. I was tired of living paycheck to paycheck helping my parents pay for utilities that amounted to what I took home after deductions. I was tired of working twice as hard to see my wages only go to bills and not enough to provide more for myself. I was tired of the empty and broken promises set forth from our leaders and after election—wasn't remembered or even validated. I was tired of living in the shadows of our Commonwealth, so I moved.

I take pride in being a Chamorro from the CNMI. I've upheld my tradition, customs, and culture. One day I hope to return home and live in our home paradise but not when I can't rely on improper healthcare, limited resources for education or high cost of living. Yes, our retirees are given back their full pension as well as retro pay for the past year. Yes, our people received utility vouchers. Yes, it is the promise that IT will continue and that IT will work harder but...IT was given sufficient time in the past few years to do so. Why just now?

Let's stop living in the shadows of broken promises and lies. Let's stop holding our breaths for empty promises of making change happen because it only happens when they need something. Let's give Heinz and Ray a chance to affect the changes our CNMI needs to thrive and progress. Let's give Heinz and Ray a chance to be the change we need. Ask yourself, can you afford to wait for change or do you want change to happen now? Vote for Heinz and Ray in this runoff—the change starts with you.

The fortune cookie and a glass of water

My name is Gabriel Dela Cruz Camacho. I was born and raised in the beautiful village of Oleai and now a resident of Capital Hill. I have served under many administrations under different capacities dating back since the Trust Territory days. I worked with the last Mariana Islands District Legislature in 1976, then with the inception of the new Northern Marianas Islands Legislature. I also worked as assistant legislative affairs officer under former governor Carlos S. Camacho and was deputy/acting Secretary of Finance under former governor Froilan C. Tenorio where I retired in 1997.

During my days of work, I dealt with many issues involving decisions that were both critical and compromising. This runoff election involves a lot of retirees like me having to make a decision so that we could continue to have our benefits and live a happy retirement life. The views I express should be taken as my personal observation and not to break my family or anyone's family gubernatorial choice.

What I'd like to offer is an analogy between the two campaigns in the runoff.

When you walk into a Chinese restaurant, you are treated to a fortune cookie and a glass of water. Now let's say that the fortune cookie represents Inos-Torres and that the water is Hofschneider-Yumul. The message hidden in the fortune cookie could give you the blessings that you're waiting for or something not so appealing to you. A lot of the time with fortune cookies, our expectations are high but the reality is not good enough, so you go ahead and eat the cookie. As for the water, it is clear. You could see right through it as it represents transparency. You ate the cookie and happened to choke on it, so do you eat another one? Or do you drink the water to solve the problem? So you drink the water because it solves the problem that the fortune cookie could not do.

The moral of this story is to allow you to understand that you must see things through and not things hidden that may entail disaster.

So I appeal to my family and friends and humbly ask for your support in voting for Heinz-Ray this coming runoff election so that our lives can "change" for the better starting with you, starting now.

WHO BENEFITS?

In March 2014, Governor Eloy S. Inos commissioned a report called, "Saipan Casino Taxation". In it, several tax models were outlined including one which assumed $366,000,000 gross revenue or $1,000,000 per day in revenues for the casino.

After deductions, and various "tax adjustments", the casino could claim a net income of $49,000,000, on which they would pay $82,000 in taxes to the CNMI.

Special Saipan Casino Income Tax Structure	Saipan Gaming Income Tax Liability for
Net Gaming Revenue	$49,500,000
Income Tax Liability	$5,306,680
GRNRC Adjustment	($2,476,380)
SCNRC Adjustment	($2,661,870)
Tax Rebate Offset	($87,122.94)
Total	$81,307

The current tax structure of the Commonwealth which provides a low gross revenue tax rate and three-tiers of reductions for income associated with Saipan casino provides significant incentives for long-term investment and growth of the economy.

But that was evidently not good enough. So, on June 18, 2014, the legislature passed H.B. No. 18-195, HD1, now Public Law 18-56 to give the casino a 100% tax exemption for 40 years.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Second Special Session

June 18, 2014

Representative Rafael S. Demapan, of Saipan, Precinct 2 (for himself, Representative Felicidad T. Ogumoro) in an open and public meeting with an opportunity for the public to comment, introduced the following Bill:

H. B. No. 18-195, HD1

AN ACT

TO REPEAL AND REENACT PUBLIC LAW 18-38 AS AMENDED

COMMONWEALTH.

So, the casino will NOT pay taxes for the next 40 years.
THEY PAY $0 taxes on $366,000,000 in revenue.

Who benefits from this arrangement?
NOT YOU. NOT the Commonwealth.
NOT even the Retirees.

Palau president wins global environmental honor

NOUMEA, New Caledonia—Palau President Tommy Remengesau Jr. has won the United Nation's highest environmental accolade, a Champion of the Earth Award, for spearheading major conservation initiatives and building the Pacific nation's economic resilience through green economy policies.

The Director General of the Secretariat of the Pacific Community, Dr. Colin Tukuitonga, has welcomed the recognition by the UN Environment Programme of Remengesau's leadership on environmental issues in the Policy Leadership category.

"This is a well-deserved accolade for President Remengesau and I wish to extend my congratulations on behalf of the Secretariat of the Pacific Community," Tukuitonga said.

"The President has led numerous conservation and broader environmental policies and initiatives which have implications beyond the Pacific region, for example by establishing the world's first Nationwide Marine Sanctuary that protects more than 80 percent of Palau's 600,000 square kilometer of exclusive economic zone."

Remengesau was presented with his award by UN Secretary-General Ban-Ki-moon and UNEP executive director Achim Steiner at a ceremony in Washington, D.C. yesterday, Nov. 19.

"I am honored to receive this award on behalf of the traditional leaders, the people of Palau, and the islanders around the world, who are the stewards for the protection of our vast oceans and natural wealth," Remengesau said in a UNEP statement.

Highlights of SPC assistance in relation with environment and conservation to Palau include the introduction of an energy efficiency retrofitting loans scheme and formal training programs in such fields as fisheries development, aquaculture, disaster risk assessment and energy security.

For an overview of the development results Palau is achieving with SPC support see the 2014 Palau Country Programme report.

The Champions of the Earth is the UN flagship environmental prize that recognizes outstanding visionaries and leaders in the fields of policy, science, entrepreneurship, and civil society action.

Cultural exchange students program officials sign for Koblerville Elementary School and Whole Persons Christian Academy of Korea.

Koblerville Elementary School and Whole Person Christian Academy in Korea continue their partnership through a cultural exchange student program. This partnership has been ongoing for about three years in which at least 10 to 15 students in Kindergarten to 5th grade from Korea come and visit the island.

The students are usually accommodated by the school for two to three weeks to learn from each other in terms of individual cultures and education system. During the summer in 2015, the Koblerville Elementary School students aim to visit Korea under this program.

Koblerville Elementary School has a MY WAVE CLUB program that promotes tourism in the CNMI. Their goal is to help the community promote tourism through partnership and through building relationship with the children from other nation. (PR)

First-time participants from GMS stand out at forensic competition

Green Meadow School fielded only a small group of students to compete in the Nov. 8, 2014, Primary Grade Forensic Competition held at Grace Christian Academy. Belonging mostly to Kindergarten classes and new grade students who are transferees from other schools, all of them competed for the first time at PGFC with outstanding results! Coaches of the students as well as their parents admitted that most of them were kind of worried as to how the children would perform for the first time in a competition and in front of a large audience.

Green Meadow School's administration congratulates all the competing students and thanks the coaches for the great job in training the students. GMS management also expresses its appreciation to the parents and friends for supporting the children before and during the competition."

Since the Administration and IT campaign refuse to provide credible information about the Governor's health the public must resort to speculating about the constitutional ramifications of the Governor's incapacity. The voters have a right to know who will be at the head of this government a few weeks from now, a few months from now, a year or two from now.

We respectfully ask a few relevant questions: Will the Governor resign or will his incapacity simply render him unable to run the government full-time? -as is presently the case. Under those circumstances, will there be a special election or will the constitutional succession provisions kick in and make Ralph DLG. Torres the next governor? Who will be his lt. governor?

Think about IT.

Are you voting for Ralph DLG. Torres and is he experienced enough to be the CNMI's next governor?

"The people, in delegating authority, do not give their public servants the right to decide what is good for the people to know and what is not good for them to know."

Hofschneider-Yumul camp question Inos' debate snub

The Hofschneider-Yumul campaign feels disappointment together with the people of the CNMI in light of Gov. Eloy S. Inos' non-participation in a debate/forum. The committee-to-elect and the public-at-large have been anxious to have this debate as many undecided voters have expressed interest in listening to both men's plans for the future.

"Now that it has come down to a man-to-man competition, it is absolutely crucial for the people of the CNMI to hear from the two gubernatorial candidates," said gubernatorial candidate Heinz Hofschneider. "The governor's denying the people hear from him—undecided voters, especially—speaks volumes to his administration's lack of transparency."

"This surely shows weakness in the current administration," Hofschneider said. "A weakness, first, in being so withholding from the people. It raises questions on the governor's physical weakness, not being able to publicly state his health conditions to an electorate that doesn't consist of merely his supporters."

"There's also a weakness in his ability to defend himself," Hofschneider added. "Gov. Inos has said that he'd let the last 20 months of their administration speak on their behalf. The last 20 months do not call into question the governor's various roles and decision-making in the Fitial administration. They don't take into account the hard work and good that Lt. Gov. Jude Hofschneider has done for the CNMI while in the capacity of acting governor."

"There is weakness to be questioned in his ability to be an adequate financial manager for the CNMI," Hofschneider said, referring to the governor's time as Secretary of Finance under Fitial. "This leaves a lot to be questioned when the governor has allowed $23 million to go unpaid to CUC and his failure to remit $200 million to our Retirement Fund. There is also the issue of his hiding the truth that the Settlement Agreement will only last four years."

Hofschneider was eager to engage the governor on the logic behind the 40-year tax exemption for the casino. "First, the administration kept the people out of the decision-making of this whole casino project, now they won't be here to answer the people's questions on where protection is for the financial security for this and future generations."

"We can only give so much sympathy for a man who is seeking the highest office in the Commonwealth," Hofschneider said. "He is a public figure which demands full, constant engagement in multiple, complex issues."

"They've hidden the truth of the governor's health and perhaps Ralph Torres' inexperience or questionable ability to be a real leader," Hofschneider said. "This comes as no surprise as the governor has spent the last nine years hiding the financial mismanagements and lack of vision in policy making that has constantly brought us to federal court in such cases as with the Retirement Fund and CUC's stipulated orders. This has led to federal court-driven solutions." (PR)

House top vote-getter believes in Inos-Torres

Representative-elect Angel A. Demapan (R-Precinct 1), the top-vote getter amongst all candidates for House of Representatives, strongly believes that an Inos-Torres administration will continue the current upward trend in the Commonwealth's economy.

"The facts are there and their record of accomplishment tells it like it is," said Demapan. "Since becoming governor only 21 months ago, the CNMI's GDP numbers have steadily posted strong signs of economic growth."

Moreover, Demapan points out that one of the significant reasons why so much progress has been achieved lately is because of the spirit of cooperation being fostered by the administration, the U.S. delegate and the CNMI Legislature.

"As the governor's press secretary, I've had the opportunity to witness first-hand how well Gov. Inos and Senate President Torres have worked with our elected leaders," said Demapan. "In fact, when the Inos-Torres team was formed, I was even more motivated to run for office under the Republican Party because I felt that this was a leadership we can depend on for our future."

"The team of Inos-Torres are doing more than talking about their message of hope, they are working hard for all of us today," he added.

Demapan's campaign for a House seat zoomed in on the need to develop a comprehensive plan for the establishment of a viable citizen workforce in light of the recent five-year extension of the CW program. This will remain a priority when he joins the 19th Legislature in January.

"We need to develop a strong citizen workforce in order to meet the federal mandates that have been imposed upon the Commonwealth," stated Demapan. "I believe this is important because the issue of workforce greatly impacts our economy. And with the major uptick in visitor arrivals and the new hotels and resorts that will be constructed, we need to work with all stakeholders, public and private, local and federal, to come up with the most sensible solutions."

Demapan noted that the Inos-Torres team garnered the overwhelming support of the people in the general election, a strong indication of the public's confidence in the leadership of Inos and Torres.

"I am so grateful too for the overwhelming support I received from the good people of Precinct 1. So this runoff election, I humbly ask my supporters and the people of the Commonwealth to join me in supporting the team of Inos and Torres. Together, we can continue giving the people the leadership they want and the progress they deserve," said Demapan. (PR)

SHEFA official slams deceptive HY statement

Joe Mafnas, vice chairman of the board of directors for the Saipan Higher Education Financial Assistance, had the following comments regarding what he says is a "misleading and deceptive" press release issued by Heinz Hofschneider and Ray Yumul.

"In a press release issued today by Yumul and his running mate Heinz Hofschneider, an allegation was made that, with the passage of Public Law 18-56, SHEFA funding would be in limbo. Nothing could be further from the truth," Mafnas said.

"The real facts are that Public Law 18-56 prohibits new licenses or additional machines over the present number of machines for poker gaming after April 2015. All poker licenses issued prior to this date will remain in operation indefinitely provided, of course, that poker operators continue to comply with poker operation regulations."

"What makes this allegation even more dumbfounding to me is the fact that Ray Yumul was present during the discussions on this legislation as a sitting senator. Does Ray not talk to his own running mate?" Mafnas asked.

"The students that benefit from SHEFA deserve so much more than to be lied to by individuals trying to become the leaders of our Commonwealth," Mafnas stated. "The bottom line is that the existing poker machines will continue to provide funding to SHEFA. End of story! (PR)

Propst: NMI wants responsible governance

Representative-elect Edwin K. Propst won handily in Precinct 1 where 17 candidates vied for six House seats. As a public interest advocate, Propst believes the community wants responsible governance and is looking for leaders who will put the public interest first.

"I believe that unemployment and high utility rates are two of the biggest challenges facing the CNMI today," said Propst. "For starters, the private sector must stop subsidizing the government's failure to pay their utilities in a timely manner. It is equally important for the government to actively reduce its heavy reliance on fossil fuels and to invest in alternative energy and other infrastructure that will last beyond the next 10 to 20 years; this will help CUC customers and ensure that we're planning for the future."

Propst said one of the major reasons he is endorsing Hofschneider and Yumul is that this team recognizes the importance of setting the community on a path to alternative energy and has a total commitment to infrastructure development that will last beyond the usual 10-year period.

"During our house-to-house visits, Heinz and Ray heard for themselves how hard it is for the average family to pay their power bills; they know what it is like out there and they have real, workable solutions," Propst said. "I am a big believer in listening and fully trust that Heinz and Ray have taken to heart the expressed needs of our community and that they are prepared to follow through on their commitments."

According to Propst, the other challenge facing the Commonwealth is unemployment, which he says will require greater attention to education and training. "Furthermore," he stated, "there is an increasing need for a well-trained local workforce in order to meet future labor demands if our economy is to expand and improve."

'The 'slim few' have been in power for too long'

Inos-Torres and their group of powerful business and political friends have dominated the political, economic and social segments of our community for almost 15 years and they claim that we think that only a "slim few are qualified" to be governor and lieutenant governor of our Commonwealth, said HY campaign spokesman John P. Del Rosario.

"That is a claim no one will find believable, in light of all the facts," he said. "Keep in mind the slim few that have been at the helm of our government for the last 15 years. The previous administrations have been rotating their leadership, simply inheriting and perpetuating the major problems plaguing the people of the CNMI. They have carried out often outdated solutions. The CNMI needs new ideas."

"Even Juan N. Babauta, one of their challengers—and now new friend—thought they needed new ideas," Del Rosario said. "We are naturally hoping that the general public feels it is time to retire their approach and pass the mantle to the next generation of leaders, ideas and approaches." (PR)

'IT does not protect education'

Hofschneider-Yumul campaign spokesman John P. Del Rosario says the Inos-Torres camp's claim of "protecting" education is false.

"If you really look at the course this current administration has taken with regard to funding the Northern Marianas College and the Public School System," Del Rosario said, "their record is abysmal and IT's 'IT Protects Education' road signs should read 'IT Drains Education.'"

"Look at the budget for fiscal year 2007," Del Rosario said. "The budget, signed into law by Inos' predecessor, Gov. Fitial, approved over $38 million for PSS. If 'protection' was their intention, then why was there a 16-percent decrease in that funding in the budget for the current fiscal year? Each year, subsequent to 2007, public school officials were in the news, the Legislature, making hay over the governor's withholding of millions of dollars."

"Even Education Commissioner Dr. Rita Sablan has expressed frustration over inadequate funding this year," Del Rosario said, "saying that the current budget is not enough to ease the pain of large class sizes due to the inability to hire more teachers. She has even hinted at a possible 'state of emergency' that CNMI PSS may have to declare."

"This doesn't sound leadership 'protecting' education to me," Del Rosario said. "And not funding the public school utility payments is irresponsible as well but I guess they figure if the central government doesn't pay its power bills, the school system should be lumped into the mix as well, leaving schools to negotiate with the CUC over and over and over and that's a waste of energy and valuable resources."

"Furthermore, look at NMC," Del Rosario continued. "From FY 2007, the over $5 million that was budgeted for the college has taken a comparable hit. In the current fiscal year, there has been a nearly 18-percent decrease in funding from seven years ago."

"For college students here at NMC and abroad, the threat of losing scholarships should be a major concern," Del Rosario said. "And the current administration, through the casino law, has effectively ended the Saipan Higher Education Financial Assistance without a known plan to replenish it."

"Since SHEFA is funded by poker license revenue and the casino law states that no new licenses will be honored in light of the Best Sunshine casino, that leaves SHEFA's future in limbo with no known plans by this administration to save it," Del Rosario said. "That sounds like IT protecting their business interests, not protecting education."

"When our students needed 'protection,' the administration chose to approve budgets and laws that continually drained education resources" Del Rosario said. "You don't 'protect' education by underfunding it." (PR)

Ralph Yumul endorses HY in runoff

Rep. Ralph Yumul has endorsed the Hofschneider-Yumul team in the runoff election.

"Beyond the fact that Ray is my brother, I truly believe that alongside Heinz, the Hofschneider-Yumul tandem will bring about significant changes in the state of government affairs," Yumul said. "They both understand the state of the Commonwealth and have the experience to come in and clean things up. Heinz, a former House speaker, and Ray, an experienced legislator since the 14th Legislature, both have their hearts and minds in sync with the people."

"Ray, as a representative, I know, has stood with our people when controversial bills and tough issues were on the table," Yumul continued. "Heinz and Ray can and will restore trust back into the government after nine years of an administration that has many people wary of trusting public servants. We need confidence restored in order to thrive as a people and as a Commonwealth."

"I kindly ask my supporters to continue this movement for change and transparency in our government," Yumul said, "and to cast their vote for Heinz and Ray this runoff election." (PR)

9th Mission Support Command honors veterans

Brig. Gen. John Cardwell, commanding general, 9th Mission Support Command, attended a Veterans Day ceremony and gave the keynote speech to his soldiers, local veterans and their families at the American Memorial Park on Saipan on Nov. 11, to honor their service and remember the fallen on Veterans Day.

This was the first time a commanding general of the 9th MSC has attended a Veterans Day ceremony on Saipan.

Veterans Day is a day of reflection, remembrance, pride and patriotism. However, this particular ceremony had even deeper relevance for the locals as it coincided with the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Saipan, a very important part of the Pacific Campaign of World War II.

Cardwell was joined on this day by CNMI Lt. Gov. Jude Hofschneider.

Describing the historic relationship between Saipan as a Commonwealth of the United States, Hofschneider explained: "It was through the selfless gestures of a helpful country, that we, as a people, were given a sense of renewal along with a spirit of patriotism. This morning we commemorate those patriots who truly went beyond the call to serve their fellow men and women," Hofschneider said. "We pay tribute to those who sacrificed their lives in WWI, and we salute the Greatest Generation—the soldiers, airmen, Marines and their local scouts who helped them secure the islands during the war."

During his speech Hofschneider talked about the history of the island's relationship with the United States and how a single act has inspired generations of service among the people of Saipan. He went on to honor those who served in WWII, Korea, Vietnam, Desert Storm and those who most recently defended the nation in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Cardwell, a Tennessee native from a small, tight-knit community and a veteran himself, related strongly to the sense of community, encouraging attendees to continue to "truly honor our veterans by following the three 'Rs': remember, respond and resolve."

He encouraged all attendees, from seniors to children, to be living memorials to our veterans.

"Resolve not to waste a single day of the freedom we enjoy. For when we resolve to do so, then all the souls of veterans, living and past, can rejoice in knowing that the sacrifices they made yesterday, are still allowing all of us today, to build a better tomorrow," said Cardwell.

The 9th MSC is most ethnically diverse, geographically dispersed command in the U.S. Army Reserve, crossing seven time zones, two states, two territories, and a commonwealth. It has units located in the Hawaiian Islands, Guam, Saipan, Alaska, American Samoa, Japan and Korea. (Hawaii Army Weekly)

Tebuteb stands firmly behind Heinz and Ray

Ray Tebuteb, a six-term member of the House of Representatives who recently won re-election to another term in Precinct 3, said he stands firmly in support of Heinz and Ray because the Commonwealth "needs leaders who are not compromised by big money and special interests and leaders who are prepared to make decisions that benefit the majority of people in the CNMI."

Tebuteb said the last term in the House of Representatives was extremely challenging given the entrenched interests and he is thankful to his constituents, the public, and other members of the House who fought for the issues they believe serve the greater good.

"Today's politics has been marred by self-interest and big money and I believe that the candidacy of Heinz and Ray will change that, which is why I support them and I ask my supporters to do the same," Tebuteb said. "My precinct may be the site of a casino and I know that we will need substantial upgrades in infrastructure to prevent our constituents in Garapan from the negative impacts of a development so large. This is not something I am willing to leave to chance."

"It is not clear to me that the current administration or the casino is interested in sparing the Commonwealth from the ill-effects of casino activity but I know that given the current path we are on, this will not be good for the Commonwealth or the people of my precinct," Tebuteb said.

Tebuteb lives with his wife and children in Garapan. A long time advocate of health, fitness, cultural and recreational development, he recently sponsored, along with musicians in the CNMI, the first Ukulele Festival, saying, "I am proud to promote and keep the arts alive and well in the CNMI and hope to contribute to the expansion of this event."

"I am supporting Heinz and Ray because they are motivated by the same commitment to community service that prompted me to run for public office," said Tebuteb. "I believe Heinz and Ray will make decisions that will preserve the way of life here in the CNMI in regards to our culture, traditions and language. I also believe they will be guided by the rule of law in their deliberations of the issues and that is important to preserve and protect our democracy which is at great risk at this moment. It is important for people to vote for Heinz and Ray in the runoff election, our future depends on it." (PR)

Busan travel agents tour Saipan, Tinian

Travel agents from the second largest city in Korea toured Saipan and Tinian this month in a FAM (familiarization) tour jointly sponsored by the Marianas Visitors Authority (MVA) and Asiana Airlines.

The tour aimed to educate the eight participating travel agents about the destination, in order to raise awareness of direct flights between Busan and Saipan and increase sales volume for Saipan and Tinian packages.

"We're projecting an increase in visitor arrivals this year from Korea, and visitors from the Busan area are an important part of that projection," said MVA Marketing Manager Bruce Bateman. "The MVA is pleased to sponsor this FAM tour in conjunction with Asiana and our tourism partners to give travel agents in Busan a taste of the Marianas, in person. This makes them better equipped to sell our destination."

While in the Northern Marianas from Nov. 5-9, 2014, the group inspected Mariana Resort & Spa, Aqua Resort Club, Fiesta Resort & Spa, Saipan World Resort, Hyatt Regency Saipan Laolao Bay Golf & Resort, Pacific Islands Club Saipan, Coral Ocean Point Resort, and Tinian Dynasty Hotel & Casino. Sightseeing tours took them to Bird Island Lookout, Grotto, Banzai Cliff, House of Taga, Chulu Beach, Tinian Blowhole, and the award-winning Managaha. The group also took in a sunset dinner cruise, ATV tour, and boat tour.

In fiscal year 2013, visitors from Korea comprised 30 percent of total visitor arrivals to the Northern Mariana Islands. (MVA)

Travel agents and an Asiana Airlines manager from Busan, South Korea, visit Managaha as part of their tour of Saipan and Tinian on Nov. 5-9, 2014, on a familiarization tour jointly organized by Asiana and the Marianas Visitors Authority.

Model-TV host Dickinson accuses Cosby of assault

NEW YORK (AP)—Model and TV host Janice Dickinson added her name to the women who have accused comic Bill Cosby of sexual assault.

In an “Entertainment Tonight” interview that aired Tuesday, Dickinson said that the 1982 incident occurred in Lake Tahoe, California, where he was appearing.

She told the TV newsmagazine that she wrote about the assault in her 2002 autobiography, “No Lifeguard on Duty: The Accidental Life of the World’s First Supermodel,” but that Cosby and his lawyers pressured her and the publisher to remove the details.

A call to Cosby’s publicist seeking comment was not immediately returned.

In the interview, Dickinson said she met Cosby in Lake Tahoe at his urging after he said that he would help her with her singing career. They had met earlier when her agent had introduced them, hoping that she could get a job on “The Cosby Show.”

Cosby

Dickinson said that after dinner, she and Cosby were in her hotel room and that he gave her some red wine and a pill. She told “Entertainment Tonight” she had asked for a pill because she had been suffering stomach pains.

“The next morning I woke up and I wasn’t wearing my pajamas and I remembered before I passed out I had been sexually assaulted by this man,” she said. She said she remembered Cosby dropping the robe he had been wearing and getting on top of her.

She said she never confronted Cosby about the incident.

“I’m doing this because it’s the right thing to do and this happened to me and this is a true story,” she said.

In the memoir, Dickinson described stopping at his hotel room door when he invited her in after dinner. She declined, claiming exhaustion.

“After all I’ve done for you, that’s what I get?” Dickinson quoted Cosby as saying. He then “gave me the dirtiest, meanest look in the world, stepped into his suite, and slammed the door in my face,” she wrote.

Cosby, 77, who was never criminally charged in any case, settled a civil suit in 2006 with another woman over an alleged incident two years before.

Attention to the legendary entertainer’s past flared suddenly in recent weeks after another comic, Hannibal Buress, called Cosby a “rapist” during a Philadelphia performance. Two other women have emerged as accusers, including Barbara Bowman, who wrote an online Washington Post piece.

Cosby has remained silent, and his attorney, John P. Schmitt, issued a statement Sunday saying his client would not dignify “decade-old, discredited” claims of sexual abuse with a response. Schmitt later exempted the 2006 civil case from the blanket statement.

‘Mockingjay’ stars reflect on growing up together

NEW YORK (AP)—Sitting down to interview Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson and Liam Hemsworth, stars of the blockbuster “Hunger Games” franchise, feels a bit like hanging out with three siblings.

While Hutcherson ponders a question, Lawrence and Hemsworth are surreptitiously playing a game of hand-slap, Lawrence pulling her hand free just in time. When one of the guys says reflectively, “Maybe I was just an idiot,” Lawrence pipes up: “Yes, you ARE an idiot!” There are giggles, and a totally inside joke involving the phrase “My ears hurt,” spoken in baby voice. (Don’t ask.)

“I met my best friends in the world on this movie,” Lawrence says, turning serious, of Hutcherson and Hemsworth. “We love each other. They’re as close to me as my family, and in some ways they ARE my family.”

Lawrence, who plays Katniss Everdeen for the third time in “The Hunger Games: Mockingjay: Part 1,” opening Friday, is known for being a straight shooter—and not just with a bow and arrow. And so when she talks about her co-stars, it sounds refreshingly nothing like canned Hollywood-speak, in which everyone professes how it was SO great working with everyone else.

Instead, the 24-year-old Oscar winner explains how she, Hutcherson and Hemsworth (22 and 24 respectively) grew up together on set over the past several years—and became famous together, though Lawrence’s star has risen the fastest.

“We all have the actor thing in common where we left home very early—I left home when I was 14,” Lawrence says. “And our lives changed together in a way that nobody else in the whole world understands.”

In fact, she says, just the night before, the trio attended a dinner—exhausted—and sat for the first half entirely silent, like families sometimes do. “People were thinking, they must not really like each other,” she says. Chuckles Hutcherson: “Yeah, they’re thinking it’s all an act!” Adds Hemsworth: “You’ve got to be really close to not talk at all.”

Promoting the third film in the Suzanne Collins trilogy—filmmakers have split “Mockingjay” in two parts—has brought back familiar questions about parallels between the characters and the actors who play them. Katniss and Peeta Mellark (Hutcherson) are both thrust into dizzying fame in the first “Hunger Games” when they’re chosen to represent District 12 in the fight-to-the-death spectacle forced on them by the Capitol, ruled by shadowy President Snow (Donald Sutherland). In the third movie, along with Gale (Hemsworth), they each figure in different ways in the rebellion spreading through the country of Panem.

“I always get kind of nervous when people make parallels,” says Lawrence. “(Katniss) led a rebellion that changed the world, and I’m just an actor telling people I need more lipstick or whatever.”

She does, though, understand why people latch onto the “reluctant fame” idea, since she herself initially hesitated before accepting the role that catapulted her to global fame.

“We all had an idea of how big this was going to be, which is why I took a few days before I said yes, and really thought about what I wanted,” Lawrence says. “Saying yes to this was going to completely change my life.”

Hutcherson says he was oblivious. “I had to say I didn’t expect any of it,” he says of sudden stardom.

“You’re not as paranoid and neurotic as me,” Lawrence quips.

Lawrence, who has spoken bluntly and forcefully about privacy concerns, feels her co-stars need to be more security-conscious. “I recently changed my number and texted them, ‘Hi boys,’ and they answered back blah blah and didn’t even ask a security question!” she says, in mock disapproval.

“But I knew it was you,” protests Hemsworth. “Nobody else would text us, ‘Hi, boys!’”

Lawyer: Tracy Morgan is battling severe brain injury

TRENTON, N.J. (AP)—Tracy Morgan is fighting to recover from a severe brain injury suffered in a highway crash more than five months ago, and it’s uncertain if he will be “the Tracy Morgan he once was,” his lawyer said Tuesday.

Benedict Morelli said the former “Saturday Night Live” and “30 Rock” star suffered a traumatic brain injury in the June 7 crash on the New Jersey Turnpike, in addition to a broken leg, nose and ribs.

“He’s fighting to get better, and if there’s a chance for him to be back to the Tracy Morgan he once was, he’s going to try to do that,” Morelli said. “But we just don’t know because of the severity of the injuries that he sustained and the fact that he had such a severe brain injury.”

Lawyers were in court in New Jersey for a scheduling conference in Morgan’s lawsuit against Bentonville, Arkansas-based Wal-Mart Stores Inc., whose truck was involved in the crash. Morgan wasn’t at Tuesday’s proceeding, during which lawyers met with the judge to settle on a schedule.

A Wal-Mart truck slammed into a limo van that was carrying Morgan and several friends on their way back from a show in Delaware. One person was killed, and three others were injured, two seriously. Morgan spent several weeks in a hospital and in rehab.

Morelli didn’t discuss specific aspects of Morgan’s condition but said he hasn’t fully recovered.

“When you have a traumatic brain injury it takes a very long time to find out how you’re going to do and how much you’re going to recover,” Morelli said. “You just don’t know. So that’s where he is. He’s still fighting and trying to live his life at the same time and trying to get better, and he’s just not better. We’re hoping and praying to get him back to where he was. But the jury’s out.”

A comedy series Morgan was to have begun filming in August for FX Network was put on hold after the accident.

Morgan sued for punitive and compensatory damages. In a response to the lawsuit filed in late September, Wal-Mart contended the victims’ injuries were partly due to the fact that they weren’t wearing seatbelts.

Attorneys representing Wal-Mart didn’t comment after Tuesday’s proceeding.

Georgia truck driver Kevin Roper, who is not named in Morgan’s lawsuit, was charged with death by auto and four counts of assault by auto in state court. Last Friday, he filed to have Morgan’s lawsuit delayed while that case proceeds. That matter is scheduled to be ruled on next month.

A preliminary investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board released in June said Roper was driving 65 mph in the minute before he slammed into the back of the van. The speed limit on that stretch of the New Jersey Turnpike is 55 mph but was lowered to 45 mph that night because of construction.

People mag names Hemsworth 'Sexiest Man Alive'

NEW YORK (AP)—People magazine has named Chris Hemsworth the “Sexiest Man Alive” of 2014, cheering the Australian actor’s rise as hammer-wielding, bone fide hunk in the “Thor” films.

‘Hunger Games’ stars dream up an alternate cast

Quick (AP)—If they were doing a “Hunger Games” remake, who should play the leading roles?

We recently posed the question to the franchise’s three young stars—Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson and Liam Hemsworth—and they came up with some entertaining answers.

Hemsworth, aka Gale Hawthorne, boldly going first: “I’d probably want Melissa McCarthy to play my part. (Laughter all around.) I just think she’s great and she would bring so much honesty and truth to the role.”

Lawrence, aka Katniss Everdeen, upping the ante for her character: “I feel like Keanu Reeves or Dwayne ‘The Rock’ Johnson could really bring the strength that I was lacking, and the agility. (Eager nods of approval.) But if I were going female I’d go with Bette Davis. And I guess the obvious choice would be Shailene Woodley. She’s proven that she could do it.”

Hutcherson, aka Peeta Mellark, trying to be more contemplative about who’d fill his role: “I would choose young Dustin Hoffman, if it’s possible to go back in time. As in, ‘The Graduate’ or ‘Marathon Man.’”

Hemsworth, sneaking one in at the buzzer: “Wait—I think Jim Carrey could also really be great as Gale.”

Hemsworth, who also starred as Formula One racer James Hunt in the Ron Howard-directed “Rush” and the “Star Trek” reboots, was unveiled as the winner on Tuesday’s “Jimmy Kimmel Live!”

When asked who he wanted to thank, Hemsworth told Kimmel his parents, “for putting this together.”

He joins a list of hunks with the honor, including Bradley Cooper, Ryan Reynolds, Brad Pitt, George Clooney, Patrick Swayze, Sean Connery, Ben Affleck, Channing Tatum and Adam Levine. Mel Gibson, another Australian, was the first in 1985.

The 31-year-old star of “Thor: The Dark World” and his 38-year-old wife, Elsa Pataky of “Fast and Furious 6,” have three children. The actor’s younger brother, Liam, stars in the “The Hunger Games: Catching Fire.”

Chris Hemsworth told People that the award “bought me a couple of weeks of bragging rights” around the house and with his wife. “I can just say to her, ‘Now remember, this is what the people think, so I don’t need to do the dishes anymore, I don’t need to change nappies. I’m above that. I’ve made it now.’”

Rocky love: Letters by great women are auctioned

PARIS (AP)—An unprecedented collection of 1,500 documents from some of history’s greatest women is being auctioned in Paris, including everything from Catherine the Great’s imperious letter shunning her lover, to Brigitte Bardot’s plea to cancel the release of a song that ended up being banned in several countries owing to its sexual content.

The documents, which range from the profound to the banal, also include ones from Napoleon’s long-suffering wife Josephine, and a note to a teacher from Grace Kelly. Here are highlights of the extraordinary two-day sale, starting Tuesday.

CATHERINE OF ARAGON: SAVE MY MARRIAGE (AND YOUR CHURCH)

Catherine—the queen of England from 1509 until 1533, and the first of King Henry VIII’s six wives—fell out of favor with the fearsome monarch after she failed to produce a son and heir. In the 1529 letter intended to reach the pope, she argues: “I am completely innocent” and being cast aside “without cause.” She asks for Henry’s planned annulment to be blocked. She also warns—correctly, as it turns out—that Henry will try to split from Rome. It’s simply signed “Katherina.” After their divorce, which was not recognized by the pope, Henry sets up a separate Church of England, with himself as its head.

It sold Tuesday for 68,750 euros ($86,000).

PRINCESS GRACE MAKES EXCUSES

When a royal’s daughter fails to do her homework, she doesn’t tell the teacher a dog ate it. Grace Patricia Kelly—the American actress who married Prince Rainier III to become the Princess of Monaco—wrote to her daughter Stephanie’s French teacher after the girl came up short in class. “Please excuse Stephanie for not having done her French lesson. She left her book at school, Wednesday.

Grace de Monaco.”

EDITH PIAF’S “LA VIE EN REHAB”

Dated Jan. 5, 1956, the bitter-sweet letter from singer Edith Piaf is a loving ode to her then-husband Jacques Pills from the clinic where she was undergoing detox after alcohol and morphine addictions. In it, the French cabaret singer of the famous signature song “La vie en Rose” reminds Pills that there will be good days ahead, when she gets released. “Lovely man, have confidence in me as you have always had and you will see it’s the good side in me that will win, by the end of the detoxification... you will see that things can start again!” Piaf died seven years later of liver cancer, aged 47.

CATHERINE THE GREAT: HANDS OFF MY EMPIRE

The famously amorous Catherine II of Russia, who was linked to the coup that killed her husband Peter III, is seen in this 1762 letter shunning her lover

Stanislas Auguste Poniatowski. He wanted to come to Russia and become her new husband, but he is warned to stay away. Why? The fearsome Catherine had another lover and no intention of letting her old flame return to her life or take over her empire. “You read my letters with very little attention. I’ve told you and repeated that I risk being assaulted from all sides if you put one foot back in Russia,” she says in the blunt letter. It sold Tuesday for (EURO)17,500 ($22,000).

BARDOT’S SACHS APPEAL

Blond bombshell Brigitte Bardot’s letter is a request to a record company to scrap the suggestive, sexually-provocative song “Je t’aime, Moi non Plus.” (“I Love You...Me Neither”) that she had recorded with Serge Gainsbourg. It was straining her marriage to Gunter Sachs. Written a day after the song was first broadcast in 1967 to Philips record company, the letter speaks of the “serious and grave personal reasons to not release under any circumstances” the recording. The song was withdrawn and later recorded with Gainsbourg’s wife Jane Birkin to become one of the iconic hits of the 60s. Despite this, Bardot and Sachs still divorced in 1969.

JOSEPHINE IS UNDER NAPOLEON’S THUMB (AND QUILL)

Hardly anything remains of Empress Josephine’s letter to a friend, crossed out with aggressive ink scribbles by her domineering husband. The friend, Queen Charlotte of Wurtemberg, was apparently too politically crucial to receive heartfelt thoughts in writing. Napoleon left about 20 of the original words untouched, with Josephine’s hand nearly completely erased. According to manuscript specialist Thierry Bodin, “In this instance, Napoleon wanted to make a political union with the Queen Charlotte’s daughter, so he dictated what she could say. More broadly, it shows how women’s roles became more submissive in the 18th and 19th centuries.”

It sold Tuesday for (EURO)26,250 ($33,000).

New girlfriend is eager to rid garage of ex-girlfriend’s stuff

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, “Ron,” and I have been together for more than a year, and we now live together. His garage is full to overflowing with his ex-girlfriend’s belongings. She apparently left him and all her stuff—including her four cats—to marry some guy she met online. She no longer lives in this country.

I’m fine with taking care of the cats; they are innocent and I love them. However, I want her stuff out of the garage. Ron thinks it’s “the right thing to do” to keep it until she can arrange for it to be moved to her new place.

Abby, it has been a year and a half! She’s not going to move this stuff. I want to donate it or trash it as appropriate, and I don’t think legally we have any responsibility to tell her or ask her before we do. What do you think?

WANTS IT GONE IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR WANTS IT GONE: It would be neither appropriate nor kind to do anything to Ron’s ex-girlfriend’s belongings without warning. Ron should contact her, inform her that he wants to use his garage for the purpose it is intended, and ask if she wants the items she left to be disposed of or put into storage at her expense. He should allow a reasonable time for her to respond before doing anything, and you should distance yourself from the process.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend with one annoying habit. Whenever we have a party, she’ll invite friends without asking first, or by saying, “I told them it was OK to come.” It creates a problem because we plan our parties for a certain number of guests, and now there are two, three, sometimes even four more—often on short notice.

I like her friends, but they are not close friends of mine. Sometimes I just would like to have an intimate gathering with four to six people.

At my last gathering she invited not only her friends but also their children. It went from an intimate brunch for six to a party of 12. We even had to set up a second table.

How can I get her to stop, short of not inviting her to any more of our parties? I feel stuck in a situation that no matter what I do, I’m going to P.O. somebody. Any suggestions?

PARTY PLANNER IN GEORGIA

DEAR PARTY PLANNER: Your “friend” has a lot of nerve and no manners. She appears to be using you to entertain her other friends, which is not only rude, but also extremely presumptuous. She will continue treating you this way until you call a halt by telling her to cut it out because you don’t like it. If she can’t respect your wishes after that, see her only on a one-on-one basis.

was used appropriately and it’s going down the drain. What can I do about it? It saddens me.

THINKING ABOUT THE KIDS

DEAR THINKING ABOUT THE KIDS: It appears the woman is addicted to gambling. What she’s doing may “sadden” you, but as a taxpaying American it infuriates me because her children aren’t getting the assistance that money is meant to provide. So please, pick up the phone, call the Department of Children’s Services and clue them in to what’s happening. I’m betting they’ll be interested.

NFL suspends Peterson for at least rest of season

MINNEAPOLIS

(AP)—Adrian Peterson's dispute with the NFL reached another level when the league suspended Minnesota's star running back without pay for at least the rest of the season.

As his representatives initiated an appeal, Peterson remained at the center of an escalating argument between the league and the NFL Players Association over the player discipline process.

Commissioner Roger Goodell told Peterson on Tuesday he will not be considered for reinstatement before April 15 for his violation of the NFL personal conduct policy. Peterson pleaded no contest Nov. 4 to misdemeanor reckless assault in Texas for injuries to his 4-year-old son with a wooden switch.

The NFLPA quickly called for a neutral arbitrator to handle an appeal and sharply rebuked the league for what it labeled as inconsistency and unfairness in determining the discipline. The NFL's words were even stronger, with a nearly 1,600-word statement spelling out the conditions for Peterson's return to the field and describing the reasons for the punishment.

The NFL said Peterson would stay on the special exempt list and continue to be paid during the appeal process, but the union's attempt to at least temporarily reinstate him failed. The grievance filed against the league last week was overturned Tuesday by the arbitrator who heard the arguments, according to a person with knowledge of the situation. The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the situation.

Even if Peterson were to win a shorter suspension with an appeal, the Vikings actually playing him would be an implausible scenario given the heat they have taken and the long time Peterson has been away from the team. The Vikings have six games left and host the Green Bay Packers on Sunday.

The Vikings issued only a brief statement: "We respect the league's decision and will have no further comment at this time."

Fullback Jerome Felton said

on Twitter that characterizing his feelings on the NFL's decision as a disagreement would be the "understatement of the year." In Pittsburgh, Steelers safety Mike Mitchell questioned the system that gives Goodell executive power on player discipline.

"I'm not just trying to bash him or come down on him, but I think players would feel better if he wasn't just judge, jury and executioner," Mitchell said.

Peterson has said he intended no harm to his 4-year-old son, only discipline. Peterson was on a special exempt list at the sole discretion of Goodell, essentially paid leave while the case went through the legal system.

The NFLPA said Peterson was told that would count as time served toward a suspension, citing an unidentified NFL executive. League spokesman Brian McCarthy said the stay on the exempt list was taken into account, citing "aggravating circumstances" for the extended suspension.

Goodell announced Aug. 28 tougher punishment for players involved with domestic violence. That action stemmed from a torrent of criticism for the initial leniency toward Baltimore Ravens running back Ray Rice following a caught-on-camera knockout punch of the woman who is now his wife. Rice was later suspended indefinitely and recently had his appeal heard by an arbitrator.

According to the enhanced policy, first offenses of assault, battery or domestic violence bring a six-game suspension.

Goodell's letter to Peterson cited the "aggravating circumstance," pointing to the child's age and the significant physical difference between him and his son.

This Dec. 8, 2013, file photo shows Minnesota Vikings running back Adrian Peterson reacting as he is tended to after injuring his ankle on a play in the second quarter of an NFL football game against the Baltimore Ravens in Baltimore. The NFL suspended Adrian Peterson without pay for at least the remainder of the season.

"Further, the injury inflicted on your son includes the emotional and psychological trauma to a young child who suffers criminal physical abuse at the hands of his father," Goodell wrote. "Second, the repetitive use of a switch in this instance is the functional equivalent of a weapon, particularly in the hands of someone with the strength of an accomplished professional athlete."

Goodell also came down on Peterson for showing "no meaningful remorse" for hurting the boy and expressed concern that he "may feel free to engage in similar conduct in the future."

The injuries to the boy occurred in May. Peterson was indicted in September, a few days after the season opener. The Vikings put him on the inactive list for the next game. The day after, they announced he would resume playing until completion of his due process in court.

But with the Rice backlash as a backdrop, Peterson, the Vikings and the NFL were inundated by protests as corporations canceled sponsorships. The Vikings relented and less than two days later he was placed on the exempt list.

The union has accused the league of overstepping bounds spelled out in the collective bargaining agreement.

IOC opens door to joint bids and new sports events

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP)—Breaking from the tradition of awarding the Olympics only to a single host city, the IOC is opening the door to possible wider bids, including bids from an entire country, joint bids from more than one city and even the possibility of events held in more than one country.

The possibility of new types of bids was among the 40 recommendations released Tuesday as part of International Olympic Committee President Thomas Bach's reform agenda, his drive to make the bidding process and the games themselves more attractive and less costly.

"We want to create more diversity in the candidatures," Bach told a small group of reporters at the Olympic Museum in Lausanne. "There is no one-size-fits-all solution."

Under the proposals, the IOC would allow "the organization of entire sports and disciplines outside the host city or, in exceptional cases, outside the host country notably for reasons of geography and sustainability."

That would be a first for the Summer Games. The IOC rules already allow for events to be held in a bordering country for the Winter Games.

Bach's proposals also include scrapping the current limit of 28 sports for the Summer Games to allow for new events to come in while maintaining a limit of 10,500 athletes and 310 medal events. For the Winter Games, the proposed limit is 2,900 athletes and 100 medal events.

The proposals would allow host cities to propose the inclusion of one or more events for their games - a move which would clear the way for baseball and softball to be included in the 2020 Tokyo Olympics. Both sports were dropped from the Olympics after the 2008 Beijing Games, but are highly popular in Japan.

The package also includes measures for revamping the bid process to make it more of a partnership with candidates, creating a digital Olympic television channel to promote Olympic sports in the years between the games, and including language on non-discrimination on sexual orientation in the Olympic Charter and host city contract.

The move to change the wording of the IOC's Principle 6 follows the international outcry that erupted before the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi over a Russian law prohibiting gay "propaganda."

The proposed new clause states: "The enjoyment of the rights and freedoms set forth in the Olympic Charter shall be secured without discrimination of any kind, such as race, color, sex, sexual orientation, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status."

The reforms, called "Olympic Agenda 2020," will be put to a vote by the full IOC at a special session in Monaco on Dec. 8-9. Barring any surprise, most or all the recommendations are expected to be passed.

"It's like a jigsaw puzzle," Bach said.

The pressure for change to the bidding process has grown following the troubled race for the 2022 Winter Games. Scared off by the reported $51 billion associated with the Sochi Games, several cities pulled out of the bidding, leaving only Beijing and Almaty, Kazakhstan, in the running.

"More must be done to alleviate concerns regarding the costs and impacts of hosting the Olympic Games," the IOC document said.

The new bid process will go into effect for the race for the 2024 Summer Olympics. The United States, which hasn't hosted the Summer Games since 1996 in Atlanta, would be considered an early favorite if decides to bid. The U.S. Olympic Committee is weighing a possible bid from either Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco or Washington. Other potential contenders include Paris, Rome, and Hamburg or Berlin in Germany.

In the Summer Olympics, some events - such as sailing and many of the preliminary-round football matches - are already held outside host cities. But Bach said the IOC is now ready to open the chance for country-wide and joint bids.

"In the Summer Games, it's more about small or neighboring countries where you have distances which are manageable and feasible," he said. "We want to have more diversity, to give smaller countries the opportunity to organize games."

There has been a precedent for holding events outside the host country. Because of quarantine laws in Australia, the equestrian competition for the 1956 Melbourne Olympics was held in Stockholm.

Bach stressed there still should be a "main organizing city" with an athletes village that serves as the center of the Olympic experience.

"We want the games with the unity of time, place and action," he said.

The recommendations also include a broad review of the Youth Olympics, which debuted in Singapore in 2010. The Youth Games would be moved to non-Olympic years, meaning the 4th Summer Youth Games would be switched from 2022 to 2023.

Kobe leads struggling Lakers past Hawks

ATLANTA (AP)— Kobe Bryant scored 28 points and the Los Angeles Lakers won for only the second time this season, beating the Atlanta Hawks 114-109 Tuesday night.

Bryant's biggest shot came with 1:11 remaining, when he backed in against Thabo Sefolosha and made a fadeaway jumper despite being fouled. Bryant slapped hands with a fan on the front row and completed the three-point play, giving the Lakers a 108-102 lead.

The Hawks had a chance to force overtime after the Lakers (2-9) failed to put it away at the line. But Los Angeles smothered long-range threat Kyle Korver, leaving Pero Antic to take an open 3-pointer. It clanked off the rim and the Lakers gobbled up the loose ball to seal the victory.

Paul Millsap led Atlanta with 29 points.

Carlos Boozer added 20 points for the Lakers, and Nick Young, coming back from a thumb injury, had 17 in his first game of the season.

Jeff Teague scored 23 for the Hawks, who lost for the first time at home.

In the first half, the Lakers hardly looked like a team that had lost nine of its first 10 games, putting up a season high for points in a half while racing to a 67-52 lead. Bryant scored 19 points and Boozer chipped in with 18, including a tip-in just ahead of the halftime buzzer.

Los Angeles shot 61 percent (27 of 44) from the field and outrebounded the Hawks 22-15, leading to a 10-3 edge in second-chance points.

The Hawks started the second half with a 13-0 run but never could come all the way back from the big deficit. Down the stretch, the Lakers made enough plays to snap a four-game losing streak.

Even after Bryant missed a wild one from the corner, Jordan Hill snatched away the offensive rebound and laid it back in to put Los Angeles ahead 111-106 with 17.7 seconds remaining.

The only thing that gave Atlanta hope was the Lakers' woes at the foul line. They missed three of five during a stretch in the closing seconds.

Pelicans 106, Kings 100

In Sacramento, Anthony Davis had 28 points and nine rebound to help the New Orleans Pelicans beat the Sacramento Kings 106-100 on Tuesday on Tuesday night.

Ryan Anderson hit four 3-pointers and scored 22 points for the Pelicans, who outscored the Kings 31-15 in the third. Tyreke Evans had 18 points, and Eric Gordon scored 17.

DeMarcus Cousins had 24 points and 17 rebounds for Sacramento, which dropped to 3-2 at home. Darren Collison added 13 points and 11 assists, and Jason Thompson finished with 15 points and nine rebounds.

Evans, who had 11 fourth-quarter points, made an off-balance shot over Cousins from close range and Davis converted one of two free throws, giving New Orleans a 103-97 lead with 28.8 seconds to go.

The Pelicans trailed 54-45 at halftime, but Davis and Anderson led the way during the big third period. Davis got free numerous times inside and had 10 points and

Bucks 117, Knicks 113

In Milwaukee, Ersan Ilyasova had 20 points, and the rebuilding Milwaukee Bucks climbed above .500 for the first time in more than a year by fending off the New York Knicks for a 117-113 victory Tuesday night.

Zaza Pachulia added season highs of 14 points and 13 rebounds for the Bucks, who improved to 6-5 on the year. It was the first time the team had a winning record since March 20, 2013, when it was 34-33.

New York cut a 26-point deficit to 115-113 with 7.9 seconds left on a dunk off a baseline move by Carmelo Anthony.

Jerryd Bayless responded with two free throws for Milwaukee. He went 5 for 6 at the line in the final 26 seconds.

A desperation 3 at the buzzer by Tim Hardaway Jr. glanced off harmlessly off the rim. Anthony finished with 26 points, while Hardaway Jr. had 24.

The balanced Bucks had seven players score in double figures.

Jazz 98, Thunder 81

In Salt Lake City, the Utah Jazz seemed to be sleepwalking against the undermanned Oklahoma City Thunder. It took an outburst from their rookie coach to wake them up.

After seeing his team trail by as many as 17 points in the first half, Quin Snyder stormed past half-court and yelled at the officials, getting a technical foul.

He then turned to his own team and shouted, "Wake up!"

Alec Burks marshaled the response with 20 points and a career-high 14 rebounds to lead the Utah Jazz to a 98-81 win over the reeling Thunder on Tuesday night.

Butler, A's reach 3-year, $30M deal

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—

Free agent designated hitter Billy Butler and the Oakland Athletics have agreed to a $30 million, three-year contract, a person with knowledge of the negotiations said Tuesday night.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the A's had not announced the deal, their typical practice until a new player passes a physical. Butler would provide a right-handed bat with power who can also play first base.

Butler helped the Kansas City Royals reach the World Series last month after a 29-year playoff drought. In the postseason opener, they rallied late to eliminate Oakland in the AL wild-card game. Butler contributed two hits and two RBIs.

After losing to the San Francisco Giants in seven games, the Royals declined their $12.5 million option on Butler for next season, making the 2012 All-Star a free agent for the first time in his eight-year career.

The Royals, who selected Butler with the 14th overall pick in the 2004 draft, owed him a $1 million buyout.

The blog MLB Daily Rumors first reported his deal with the A's earlier Tuesday.

Oakland used several players at first base this year, including catcher Stephen Vogt when he was dealing with a foot injury that required surgery after the season.

A steady and productive hitter for most of his career, the 28-year-old Butler is coming off a down season. He batted .271 with nine home runs and 66 RBIs in 151 games this year, 108 of those as a DH.

Before that, he played at least 158 games in each of the five previous years, including all 162 in 2013.

Butler's best season was 2012, when he batted .313 with 29 homers and 107 RBIs. He made the All-Star team that year, when the game was played in Kansas City.

He dropped off to 15 homers and 82 RBIs in 2013, then struggled at the plate this year. As the Royals chased a playoff berth during the stretch run, he was regularly held out by manager Ned Yost in late September.

Once the Royals qualified for the playoffs, though, Butler returned to the lineup.

In his first postseason, he hit .262 (11 for 42) with eight RBIs, three doubles and a stolen base in 13 games as Kansas City won its first pennant since 1985.

Woods blasts satirical Golf Digest article

NEW YORK (AP)— Tiger Woods criticized Hall of Fame golf writer Dan Jenkins on Tuesday for a parody in which Jenkins fakes an interview with him and covers topics from his reputation as a bad tipper to his failed marriage to his six-year drought in the majors.

The online headline of the Golf Digest column is "My (Fake) Interview with Tiger," with an asterisk to add, "Or how it plays out in my mind." The print edition of the magazine has "fake" in parentheses on the cover, but not in the headline above the column.

Woods rarely goes public with his criticism of stories written about him. But on Tuesday, he wrote a guest column for Derek Jeter's new website, <http://www.theplayertribune.com>, which is a forum for athletes to connect directly with fans. The title of Woods' column was "Not True, Not Funny."

He said the fake interview "fails as parody, and is really more like grudge-fueled piece of character assassination."

Jenkins, who has been covering the majors for more than 60 years, was inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame in 2011. While he has covered all the greats dating to Ben Hogan, he never was granted a private interview with the 14-time major champion early in Woods' career.

"I like to think I have a good sense of humor, and that I'm more than willing to laugh at myself," Woods wrote. "I've been playing golf for a long time, 20 years on the PGA Tour. I've given lots of interviews to journalists in all that time, more than I could count, and some have been good and some not so much. ... But this concocted article was below the belt.

"Good-natured satire is one thing, but no fair-minded writer would put someone in the position of having to publicly deny that he mistreats his friends, takes pleasure in firing people and stifles on tips - and a lot of other slurs, too."

Jenkins said on Twitter after Woods' response, "My next column for Tiger: defining parody and satire. I thought I let him off easy." He declined further comment.

Woods was a playing editor for Golf Digest for 13 years, a relationship that began after his historic victory in the 1997 Masters. Woods and the magazine ended the deal in January 2011 when they couldn't agree on how many hours Woods should devote.

In his guest column, Woods said of Jenkins, "Frustration or resentment because I have not been more available to him should not give him a license for an underhanded attack on me as an athlete, as a professional and as a person."

"I guess Golf Digest's editors believe this is a good way to sell more magazines," Woods wrote. "I'll bet their readers don't think so. Funny they didn't think this poorly of me when I worked with the magazine. I have to say I was surprised when I saw this piece came from Jenkins, who is one of the most distinguished golf writers out there."

Woods said he has let "plenty of things slide" during his career, but not this one.

"The sheer nastiness of this attack, the photos and how it put false words in my mouth just had to be confronted," he said.

The Sand Juvy Vicious Darties drew a bye on the final play date but managed to collect enough wins in the past games to claim the Ladies division crown in the 2014 Bud Light Saipan Electronic Darts Association League.

The Darties compiled a 90-60 record in the seven-team field, three wins ahead of runner-up Jokers Kitty Kats' 87-63 slate. The Kitty Kats needed a 14-1 or a 15-0 decision over the Smoke Pub Ladies Bull-It (65-85) to grab the top spot from the Darties, but only managed a 10-5 win.

The Naked Fish Dartin Divas finished third (82-68) after suffering a 9-6 defeat at the hands of the cellar-dwelling Jokers G-Side Shooters (71-84). The Route33 Avengers (69-81) tripped the Smoke Pub Mixed Nutz (76-89), 9-6, in the other match.

Fanihi and Flame Tree division leaders Smoke Pub D' Mekaniks and Naked Fish Na'Gupu will try to seal their respective title bids Thursday night.

The Mekaniks are on top in the Fanihi division with a 125-55 mark, followed closely by Sand Juvy Put3ska (119-61). Na'Gupu (1-7-73) aims to foil sister team's Ridin' Darty's (103-77) own title bid in the Flame Tree league.

The Mekaniks takes on the VFW Warriors while Put3ska battles the Smoke Pub Destroyers in the Fanihi division. In the Flame Tree class, Na'Gupu clashes with Team Figa and the Ridin' Darty collides with Oneshot.

The final games in the Masters division will be played on Nov. 26, however, the Destroyers have sealed the crown as early as two weeks ago. They finished the season with a 130-74 record against the 160-98 slate of sister team TRA-Bull Makerz.

Yesterday was the last set of games in the Kingfisher division with the Jokers Latte Darts (129-51) and Route33 Chagi Fan (123-57) contending for the title. The A (Nov. 24 and Dec. 1), Tuesday (Nov. 25 and Dec. 2) and Chichirika (Nov. 26 and Dec. 3) divisions still have two weeks left.

Latest results in the Chichirika division have the Spartans cruising to a 12-3 win over the Snipers; Ta Chagi completing an 11-4 crushing of Blue Koi; the Disciples and Feelin' Lucky each scoring 9-6 decisions over Bull-It and Hit 'Em Up; and the Breakers escaping with an 8-7 victory against Jump It.

In the Tuesday B, High On Darts thrashed the Dartaholics, 14-1; the Dabarkads tripped the Snipers, 13-2; Marupok trounced the Mechanics, 9-6; and Mixblood squeezed out an 8-7 decision over Fearless.

The Predators ripped the Bud Brothers, 14-3; the Ridin' Darty pounded the Proofers, 13-4; the Outlawz each pulled off 11-6 wins over Sakude and Comatose; and the Mafia tripped Comatose, 9-8, in the A division.

Kentucky Fried Chicken bagged its third win in the U18 division of the 2014 BANMI Youth League after downing the Ol'Aces, 64-51, last Tuesday night at the Gilbert C. Ada Gymnasium.

Dixon Kwon towed KFC to the 13-point win after firing a game-high 24 markers. The lefty scored in each of the four quarters to lead KFC. He started slow, making 3 points in the first period, had 6 and 7 in the next two quarters, and saved his best for last, tallying 6 in the fourth.

Shane Deleon Guerrero backed Kwon up, adding 10 points, while three other KFC players combined for 20 more markers for the team's balanced offense.

Six different players hit the board for KFC in the first period, which ended with the team ahead by on only 5, 17-12. The advantaged then doubled at halftime, 31-21, with Kwon converting three field goals. Kwon also dropped three baskets in succession in the third period to help KFC keep the driver's seat, 42-35, and then he drew enough help from his teammates to increase their lead in the payoff period.

Edmond Borja paced the Ol'Aces and was the lone double figure scorer on the team with his 10 markers. The Ol'Aces dropped to a 1-5 card.

Meanwhile, Tinian also notched a double-digit winning margin over the Chalan Kanoa Saints, 65-54, last Friday.

Tinian now has a 7-0 record and will keep its unbeaten mark in the regular season, as its scheduled final game against the CNMI Girls Nationals today has been cancelled with the latter pulling out of the tournament due to lack of players.

Saipan-based player Kobe Mendoza led Tinian's win with his 18 points, while Ignacio Borja and Karlo De Leon also finished in twin digits with 14 and 12, respectively.

Mendoza nailed 11 of his total output in the first period to lift Tinian to an early double-digit spread, 19-8. Mendoza was then held to one field goal in the second canto, but Borja stepped up, tallying 8 points, as Tinian pulled away further, 41-20. The eventual champion, which earned its fourth straight U18 division crown and notched unbeaten records for three consecutive seasons, highlighted its perfect season with 32 goals—the most scored by any of the four teams in the group. The Norman Del Rosario-coached squad also gave up the least goals with 9 and registered 18 points in the double-round robin competition.

The perennial champion finished the season six markers ahead of Tan Holdings FC, which wrapped up its campaign in the fall with a 4-0-2 win-draw-loss record. Tan Holdings scored 27 goals and gave up 11. Paire and Matansa FC held identical 1-0-5 marks to take the bottom two spots with the latter drilling more goals than the former, 8-5.

GIRLS U15 Shirley's FC 4, Tan Holdings 1

Shirley's FC boosted its title bid in the girls U15 division after beating Tan Holdings FC last Saturday at the Hopwood Junior High School Field.

Diana Manacop powered Shirley's to its eighth win after logging two goals, while Katherine Magat and De Jana Muna added one each. Chloe Salvosa recorded the lone goal for Tan Holdings.

Matansa 4, Paire 0

Matansa also remained in contention for the division crown, following its demolition of Paire last weekend.

Paire, with the shutout loss, stayed in third place with its 4-0-5 slate.

Gilliam Villagomez duplicated Sally and Manacop's feat with her back-to-back goals in the second half (69th and 70th minute), while Grace Choi tallied MP United's first goal in the opening frame (23rd).

Despite easing past Kanoa, MP United remained at the bottom half of the team standings as the latter is in fifth place with its 3-0-5 record.

Perry Inos scattered 23 points to support Pangelinan's offensive onslaught, while Tim Wesley tallied 16 markers.

Tony Diaz paced CUC's losing cause with his 20 points, while John Santos contributed 16 markers.
